HONORS DAY CONVOCAATION

April 17, 2002

Westbrook Auditorium–Presser Hall
11:00 a.m.

Tari Renner
Professor and Chair of Political Science

*Recipient of the 2002 DuPont Award
For Teaching Excellence*

For Tari Renner, the key moment in every semester is when the gloves come off and his students begin to punch back. That's when he knows that he's got them thinking.

Renner, the 2002 recipient of the DuPont Award for Teaching Excellence at Illinois Wesleyan University, describes his teaching style as "in your face." His students would undoubtedly agree. "I don't want my students to agree with me," says Renner, professor and chair of the Department of Political Science. "I want to make them uncomfortable, to challenge their stereotypes. Even if they get mad at me, maybe when they get mad at me, they begin to pass that threshold of thinking for themselves. If they punch back at me, then I know that they will not accept just anything they hear or anything they read."

After receiving his bachelor's degree from the University of South Florida, Renner moved "inside the Beltway" to pursue graduate studies in American politics, public administration, public law, and urban public policy at American University. He received both an M.A. and Ph.D. from American's School of Government and Public Administration and also served as a management analyst for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Renner's first teaching position was at Maryland's Washington College, about an hour's drive from the capital. After four years in academia, he decided to venture back inside the Beltway to become director of survey research for the International City Management Association, a professional organization representing managers and administrators in local governments throughout the world.

When the opportunity to return to teaching arose, he moved to the Graduate Center for Social and Public Policy at Duquesne University in Pittsburgh where he spent six years before coming to Illinois Wesleyan in 1994.

Four years later, Renner reentered the real world of politics when he waged, and won, an uphill campaign to unseat an incumbent on the McLean County Board. He keeps close tabs on Central Illinois politics as a television commentator and also through the political polling that has been an integral part of his class, "Public Opinion and Political Participation." Results of those student-conducted polls often make headlines in the local media.

Renner's primary research interests are electoral behavior and political cultures as well as urban local government. He has written articles on a range of topics, including "State Presidential Voting Patterns and the Electoral College" in Comparative State Politics, "Electoral Congruence and the Autonomy of American State Party Systems" in American Politics Quarterly and "City Government Structures: From Confusion to Clarity" in State and Local Government Review. He holds memberships in the American Political Science Association and the Midwestern Political Science Association.

Renner takes special delight in reciting the names of Illinois Wesleyan alumni who have become active in the political process even since his time on the campus. Just as his own dual role as teacher and elected official does not permit him to stay in a bubble, he is proud that students become engaged.

"When I see people making progress, when I see the blinders come off, I am confident that they'll never put the blinders back on," Renner says. "That's rewarding."

For his dedication to the ideals and philosophy of higher education and the liberal arts, Professor Tari Renner is recognized with the university's highest teaching honor.

*This program is dedicated to the Class of 2002
and to students who have earned scholastic and activity honors.*
