*W. Michael Weis
Associate Professor of History
Recipient of 1998 DuPont Award
for Teaching Excellence*

"I can't think of anything else that I do with great regularity, except perhaps listen to rock, that gives me such pleasure" said a cheerful Mike Weis, the 1998 recipient of the DuPont Award for Teaching Excellence at Illinois Wesleyan University. "It's almost a high...teaching...and I'm amazed every day that I can go in, enjoy what I'm doing, and get paid for it!"

Weis' interests range from U.S. foreign relations, with an emphasis on Latin America, to a keen attraction for the 1960's and '70's. Not surprisingly, perhaps, he uses the word "revolution" as refrain in much of his thinking and teaching.

"I still believe we live in revolutionary times, or at least we're in reaction to revolution. Change is accelerating, it can't be stopped, can't be reversed. Americans have changed in profound ways." In a similar fashion he thinks, "university students should be changed in fundamental ways," by their college education.

"Fidel Castro said, 'The duty of all Revolutionaries is to make revolution,' and I think the duty of all teachers is to create revolutions inside their students. I'm not saying we should make our students revolutionaries--we will still educate doctors, lawyers, teachers--but teach them to adopt new values, appreciate differences and seek to become lifetime learners."

Weis grew up in a suburb of Cleveland and lived his whole life in Ohio until coming to Illinois Wesleyan ten years ago. As a teenager he says he was fascinated by "the notion of revolution." Like others of his era, he was acutely aware of the period's history--"the '68 Chicago Convention, the assassinations...I grew up 20 minutes from Kent State," and its music.

"I've made a tape for my kids that I labeled, 'Golden Protest.'" Included are songs like "Revolution," by the Beatles, "Eve of Destruction," by Barry McGuire, "For What It's Worth," by Buffalo Springfield and "My Generation," by The Who. "I also use it in my 'History of the '60s course,' which is continually popular with IWU students.

Weis earned a bachelor of science degree in education and history (cum laude) from Bowling Green State University in 1977, a master of arts degree (1982) and a doctorate (1987) in history from Ohio State University. He became enamored with Latin America, specifically Brazil, during his graduate studies and continues to pursue this interest. In the fall of 1997 he received a five-year grant from the United Nations Economic, Social and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), funded through the Third World Academy of Sciences, to study "the relationship of the United States and Brazil in the building of the Amazon."

Last summer he and his 16 year old son, Gabe, spent five weeks in Brazil. Much of the first three weeks were spent in Rio de Janeiro's National Library where Weis "searched for 19th Century historical records concerning the development of the Amazon." The next two weeks were spent traversing and camping near the river. "We left from Manaus, a city of two million, spending about a week on the river, then went to Belem, a city of one million people where the Amazon dumps into the Atlantic. From there we took short boat trips." He plans to use what he learned and saw in his fall course, "History of Modern Brazil," which will have "a much greater focus on environmental issues and dispersion of population," than it has in the past.

Weis says that his trip, and even the DuPont award "hasn't changed his teaching." He's always been confident in the classroom, has had excellent feedback from his department chair, and gotten good ratings from students. His experiences from the past year, however, and particularly in writing his Honors Day Convocation speech, have made him more "aware of the enormous responsibility teaching is."
