

5-6-2007

President's Welcome at Commencement

Richard F. Wilson
Illinois Wesleyan University

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.iwu.edu/wilson_news

Part of the Education Commons

Recommended Citation

Wilson, Richard F., "President's Welcome at Commencement" (2007). Remarks and Messages. 30.

https://digitalcommons.iwu.edu/wilson_news/30

This Article is protected by copyright and/or related rights. It has been brought to you by Digital Commons @ IWU with permission from the rights-holder(s). You are free to use this material in any way that is permitted by the copyright and related rights legislation that applies to your use. For other uses you need to obtain permission from the rights-holder(s) directly, unless additional rights are indicated by a Creative Commons license in the record and/ or on the work itself. This material has been accepted for inclusion by faculty at Illinois Wesleyan University. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@iwu.edu.

©Copyright is owned by the author of this document.

Commencement 2007
President's Welcome

Good afternoon! And what a beautiful afternoon it is! I can't tell you how much time and energy has been devoted to canvassing the weather Web site over the last five days, and it's so delightful to me to be here on a sunny and warm day for Commencement on the Quad. This is a great omen for the Class of 2007.

I have to tell you that I've waited three years to have a day like this. The first Commencement, we froze to death, the last Commencement, we had to move indoors because of thunderstorms, but today, the sun is shining.

One of the distinctive pleasures I have as president is the frequent opportunity to listen while wonderful musicians perform. Today is one of those occasions. I would like to thank the members of the Wind ensemble for sharing their talents with us this afternoon.

There is also one change in the Commencement program that I would like to call to your attention. We planned to award an honorary degree today to Marjorie Agosin, Professor of Latin American Studies at Wellesley College. Unfortunately, Professor Agosin is ill and unable to be with us. We will find another appropriate occasion to bestow this honor on a very distinguished scholar and human rights activist.

As many of you may have noticed by now, we have an empty chair on the platform draped with the colors of Virginia Tech. Each of us has been profoundly affected by the tragedy on that campus, and we search for ways to convey our sorrow and to share the burden of grief. I ask you to join me in a few minutes of silent reflection on behalf of those who lost children, friends, and colleagues...Thank you very much.

It is my distinct honor and pleasure to welcome you on behalf of the Board of Trustees and the faculty and staff of Illinois Wesleyan.

For our 518 graduates and their families this is a much-anticipated day. For the University, this Commencement Ceremony concludes our 157th year of service.

Four years ago, the class of 2007 arrived in Bloomington with a sense of exhilaration, anticipation, and no small amount of anxiety. I know those feelings well, because one year later I arrived as the University's 18th president.

And despite all of the growth and successes that you've experienced over the last four years, chances are that the graduates are feeling some of those same emotions creep back into their minds and perhaps into the pit of their stomachs.

And, this time you aren't wondering "Will I like my roommate or have I selected the right major?" Instead, you are thinking about such things as, "Have I selected the right graduate program or made the right career choice?" A few of you may even be pondering how you'll get by without Saga Dave's Sunday Brunch or Tobin's Pizza!

The emotional roller coaster that comes with graduation is nothing new. In fact, Illinois Wesleyan's very first graduate, James Hugh Barger, Class of 1853, was the sole graduate in his class at that first Commencement and, if that wasn't enough pressure, he was the son of one of our founders of the University. Now there's a helicopter parent.

Commencement marks the beginning not the end. Today, we honor you and wish you well, wherever your journey takes you. We know what you have accomplished here and what you are capable of accomplishing once you leave.

While this day and this ceremony properly focuses on you as graduates, we must not lose sight of the fact that you did not make this journey alone. You had help, and it is very appropriate that we take a moment to thank those who helped you along the way.

I would invite the graduates to please stand, and face the faculty who are seated immediately behind you and give this group of dedicated people a round of applause. While you're standing, I'd like each of you to turn in the direction of where you think your friends, relatives and siblings might be seated, and give them a round of applause. Thank you.

This is justifiably a shared occasion. I hope, and I trust, that you and your loved ones are proud of what you have accomplished and the person you have become.

I can assure you that we share this pride and the opportunity that we have had to get to know you over the last four years. I sincerely hope that we can continue to be part of your life in the years that lie ahead as you join more than 16,000 Illinois Wesleyan alumni who can be found doing great things across this country and around the world.