INAUGURATION

Wayne Anderson
16th President
Saturday, April 25, 1987

President Wayne Anderson

Dr. Anderson is the sixteenth president of Illinois Wesleyan University. As a student and practitioner of presidential leadership, he views his appointment as an opportunity to move the University to its rightful place among the best institutions in the United States.

A graduate of the University of Minnesota with a degree in political science, the 49-year-old Anderson holds the master's degree on public and international affairs from Princeton University's Woodrow Wilson School, awarded in 1961. In 1974, he earned the Ph.D. degree in government from Georgetown University in Washington, D.C., writing his dissertation on the White house staff of President Dwight D. Eisenhower. In 1980, he completed the summer program of the Institute for Educational Management at Harvard University. Four years later, he was one of nine Americans selected as Fellows of the U.S.-Japan Leadership Program sponsored by the Japan Society of New York.

After serving as an administrative intern with the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Dr. Anderson went on active duty with the U.S. Army and for a number of years later as an officer in the Army Reserves. In 1962 he became assistant to the president of the Association of American Colleges (AAC), where he supervised various commissions of the Association, all concerned with strengthening liberal arts education in the United States.

In 1966 he left the AAC to become executive assistant to the President of Johns Hopkins University during the presidencies of Milton S. Eisenhower, Lincoln Gordon and Steven Muller until 1975. At Johns Hopkins his duties involved extensive collaboration with trustees, faculty, staff, students and alumni. His work included budget and planning, program development, fund-raising and public relations, government liaison, and cooperative arrangements with other institutions.

In 1975, Dr. Anderson became the first director of the Trustee Leadership Program of the Association of Governing Boards (AGB), a national association comprising more than 700 colleges and universities, representing more than 17,000 trustees. His task was to devise programs to upgrade trusteeship in institutions of higher education throughout the country.

He was named to the presidency of Maryville College, Tennessee, in 1977 and during his tenure, the curriculum was strengthened, endowment was doubled, a weekend college was established, numerous buildings were renovated. Major foundation grants for faculty development were obtained, twice the college won first place awards in the national competition for improvement in alumni giving and it successfully completed the largest fund-raising campaign in its history.

Dr. Anderson's contributions to independent education have been outstanding. He has been a director and executive committee member of the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities and a director of the Council of Independent Colleges, as well as Tennessee's representative on the Southern Regional Education Board.

Dr. Anderson has served as chairman of the Tennessee Council of Private Colleges, chairman of the Tennessee Institute of Private Colleges and president of the Mid-Appalachia Colleges Council, Inc. He is a member of various regional and national professional groups, including the American Political Science Association and the Young Presidents' Organization, an international network of presidents in business, industry and education.

He has been a consultant for many institutions, a panelist for the National Endowment for the Humanities, and the author of numerous publications on higher education, and speaker at national educational meetings. His professional interests include presidential leadership, the legislative process, American foreign policy and the politics, culture and history of Japan.

Dr. Anderson is married to Anne McClung, an alumna of Mary Baldwin College and Harvard University, where she received her master of arts in teaching degree. After experiences in teaching, Mrs. Anderson was employed by the American College Public Relations Association, the American Council on Education and the Chronicle of Higher Education. She recently published a book of photographs of Blount County, Tennessee.

The Andersons have two daughters: Carrington, a senior at Wellesley College who will be a graduate student at Harvard University in the Fall, and Christen, a high school senior at St. Mary's College in North Carolina, who will be a freshman in the Fall at Eckerd College in Florida.

History of Illinois Wesleyan University

The University was founded in 1850 by thirty men of diverse backgrounds, religious denominations and occupations, all eager to establish "an Institution of Collegiate grade" on the Illinois prairie. The Founding Fathers, all church and community leaders, included attorneys, physicians, merchants and manufacturers, farmers and preachers. Twelve of the signers of IWU's "birth certificate" were ordained Methodist ministers; the others included Roman Catholics, Congregationalists, Quakers, Presbyterians and others.

The original agreement named the school "Illinois University," but later "Wesleyan" was inserted to honor the founder of Methodism. By 1856, the University was sponsored by two Central Illinois Conferences of the Methodist Church, although the founders stipulated in the charter of incorporation that "the profession of any particular religious faith shall not be required of those who become students." Today Illinois Wesleyan is proud of its ecumenism.

Because public schools had not yet been established on the prairie in the mid-nineteenth century, preparatory classes opened first at IWU, followed by college classes in 1851. The enrollment was seven young men (the admission of women was debated and rejected as "inexpedient" at that time) and classes were held in a church basement.

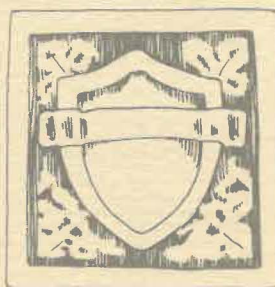

The central part of the campus was purchased in 1854 on the site of Phoenix nursery, and North Hall, the first building and destined to serve the University for 110 years, was completed in 1856. The main "college edifice" was built in 1871 and later named Hedding Hall. This building burned in 1943; its ground floor was roofed over and renamed Duration Hall.

Black students were admitted in 1867; the first black graduate received his degree in 1881. Women were finally accepted in 1870, three years before Illinois Wesleyan opened its highly regarded School of Law.

With the absorption of a downtown school of music, Wesleyan created its first professional school in 1879; in 1906 the College of Liberal Arts was formed and ten years later the University was fully accredited by the North Central Association.

A 1924 affiliation with the Brokaw Hospital school of nursing led to the formation of a four-year professional School of Nursing at IWU in 1959. In the decade earlier, the professional School of Art (1946) and School of Drama (1947) joined with the School of Music into the College of Fine Arts.

In the decade of the 1960's, the University was among the first in the nation to adopt the January Term, thus restructuring the calendar; Old North Hall was razed to make way for Sheean Library, completed in 1966; and Evans Observatory was dedicated in the presence of the crew of Apollo 8.

Detail from Buck Memorial Library

The Alice Millar Center for the Fine Arts opened in 1972, made possible by a $2 million gift from Foster McGaw, the largest single gift at that time. Currently the Fort Natatorium is under construction on the Wesleyan campus.

In 1963 Illinois Wesleyan established a policy to arrange a financial aid proposal to meet the need of any student accepted for admission, and the average aid package is now $7,000.

Student quality has been rising steadily as the University becomes more selective in its admission standards. Faculty quality is equally high, with eighty-five percent of the liberal arts faculty holding the doctorate; others hold the terminal degree in their particular field.

Wesleyan's endowment is now at $48 million, among the top ten percent in endowment size among the more than 700 liberal arts colleges in the U.S.

Academic Robes and Regalia

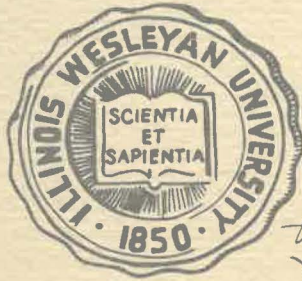

The pagentry and color of an academic convocation such as today's inauguration come to us from early medieval times when academic robes and regalia were adapted from ecclesiastical garb. Most robes were black to symbolize the democracy of scholarship, since they cover any dress or rank of social standing worn beneath. Bachelors' gowns are cut with long pointed sleeves; masters' gowns feature closed slit sleeves and doctors' gowns are full-cut with double-belled sleeves and bars of velvet trim. Some universities have authorized doctoral gowns in a single color representative of the institution, such as Harvard's crimson and the University of Chicago's maroon.

The hood, originally a simple cowl attached to the gown, bears the heaviest symbolism of the academic costume. Its lining displays the colors of the university which granted the degree, and the bordering color indicates the field of learning (or faculty) in which the degree was earned. The square cap, or mortarboard, originated in the 13th Century at the University of Paris and came to England in Tudor times. Earlier caps were round and reserved for doctoral degree holders. This velvet cap is still worn by doctors, except those with degrees in theology. Doctoral tassels are usually gold and other degrees are represented by black, but in recent years tassels have come to match the lining of the hood to indicate the field of learning.

Some of the colors you may see in this morning's Processional are as follows:

Agriculture — Maize

The Mace

During the Middle Ages, the wood mace clad in metal was an effective weapon in battle, but as newer and more powerful military arms developed, it was transformed into a symbol of authority.

The earliest ceremonial maces were borne by bodyguards of 12th century English and French kings; by the end of the 16th century, they were used widely by English cities and towns. Today the use of the ceremonial mace is found in the British Houses of Parliament, carried before ecclesiastical dignitaries and in university convocations such as this.

The Illinois Wesleyan University Mace was first carried at the 1969 inauguration of Dr. Robert S. Eckley as fifteenth president of the University. This striking symbol of the institution, created by a School of Art professor, is made of bronze for power and endurance and of walnut for organic strength.

At the top, the cupola represents the bell tower of Old North Hall, Wesleyan's original building. It was erected in 1856 and demolished in 1967 to make way for the construction of Sheean Library. The bell suggests the Hedding Bell, a campus landmark since 1931 when it was installed at IWU after pealing for generations at Hedding College. Together, the cupola and bell symbolize the union of Illinois Wesleyan and Hedding in 1930.

The staff of the Mace is carved from the walnut of Old North, and the names of the University's presidents are engraved on its cylindrical base in chronological order.

The Medallion

Used since antiquity as symbols of momentous events as well as affiliations with groups and associations, medallions were important in medieval times as symbols of membership in religious orders and guilds. As part of academic regalia, they may be struck for both ceremonial and commemorative uses.

The sterling silver medallion plated in gold in today's presidential investiture was first worn by IWU's fourteenth president, Dr. Lloyd M. Bertholf, at the 1966 Commencement. A gift from the Alumni Association, the emblem of office is a reproduction of the University seal designed in 1866 by two faculty members. Each of the lower links of the chain bears the name of an Illinois Wesleyan president with the date of his tenure. These links, in chronological order, move up both sides of the chain from the body of the medallion itself.

ALMA WESLEYANA

*From hearts aflame, our love we pledge to thee,
Where'er we wander, over land or sea;
Through time unending loyal we will be—
True to our Alma Mater, Wesleyan.
When college days are fully past and gone,
While life endures, from twilight dream till dawn,
Grandly thy soul shall with us linger on—
Star-crowned, our Alma Mater, Wesleyan!*
