This is the chosen submission to be the cover for the Park Place Economist Magazine at Illinois Wesleyan University. I created two more options represented on the following page. I think this one is the most universal out of the three so it is the most accessible. I also feel it is the most relevant to current opinions by the general public on the current economy.
These are the two other covers I created for the Park Place Economist.
I used scanned images of prints that I had made in the studio to create the background of the piece. I wanted to bring in an element of the studio and flat artwork to advertise for the student show.
My graphic design 4 class really disliked the logo and brand that had been created for Chicago as a bid city for the 2016 Olympic, so we decided to brand it ourselves as a class project. We changed it to 2020 when the winner was announced. I worked a lot with the color choices and advertisements and overall look of what we wanted the Chicago Olympics to look like. We wanted a more unique logo that represented the city in a simpler way and bright colors to represent the brightness of the city in the summer.

As part of the residential life staff at IWU I was asked to create tee shirts to give to the RA staff for a week long training session that happens before school starts. For the Fall of 2008 the theme was decidedly ORL Musical. Here was one of my ideas based off of “A Chorus Line”. The names of the residence halls on IWU’s campus have been inserted into famous musical names on the back.
As a tradition the Alternative Spring Break committee gets tee shirts for their participants as a reminder of all the hard work and learning they contributed to from their participation in Alternative Spring Break. This year they planned to go to Atlanta, GA to aid in flood relief and other community and environmental issues in Atlanta.
This is my submission to the student senate contest to design the 2009-2010 school year planner. I thought it would be more fun to use shapes and colors versus a photo of campus.
For another multipage layout I wanted to produce a more artistic form of "The New Yorker" magazine. I wanted to take the emphasis off of the words and onto the images and obstruction of words to create a higher and deeper meaning to the work. I feel that makes it more personal to the reader as the interpretation has been made more personal in how the viewer takes in the imagery and how the loss of words affects their own reading of it.
For this project we had to pick a mentor off the AIGA website and create a poster that represents that person’s design style while still making it our own. I chose Ed Fella. I really took to his style but also tried to create something of my own.
