Dear graduate:

I know that you'll enjoy the enclosed School of Theatre Arts Directory. It will offer you (and me) easy access to the addresses and telephone numbers of many of our alumni. In addition, a brief history of the School should be informative.

I'm sure you'll be pleased to know that the School of Theatre Arts continues to be rated highly. One of our students was a finalist in the Irene Ryan competitions this year at Washington, D.C. Our students and faculty once again fared excellently in The Pantagraph's Theatre Critics' Awards. And the applicants to the Theatre and Music Theatre programs continue to increase both in quantity and in quality.

Best wishes,

Jared Brown
To the recent graduates of the School of Drama, now Theatre Arts, Illinois Wesleyan would hardly have been the same without a theatre department. Yet, for almost one hundred years, IWU was indeed without one. Early dramatic performances were conducted under the auspices of the speech department, notably led by E. Melba Johnson Kirkpatrick, IWU class of ‘32, still a beloved and influential supporter of the School of Theatre Arts. Performances were in Westbrook Auditorium and at the Consistory.

In 1947 IWU officially opened the School of Drama and Speech, as the third branch of the College of Fine Arts. Headed by Dr. Lawrence Tucker, the School actively recruited students pursuing a variety of the theatre arts including performance, design, and speech. Enrollment was limited to fewer than 100 students, as it is today, to ensure each individual the most attention possible. Together, the members of the department put on an average of six major productions every year. The Speech department, emphasizing education, split off as a part of social sciences, led by Marie Robinson until it was melded back into the School of Drama and later eliminated. (Music Theatre was added in 1975.)

The School of Drama relied on Westbrook auditorium in Presser Hall as the main site of its productions. Other locations included the Main Lounge in the Memorial Student Center, The Bloomington Consistory and The Hut/Carrriage House. It was inconvenient and students and faculty longed for a place of their own.

Finally, in 1962, McPherson Hall was completed. The School of Drama at last had the modern production facility to allow for the finest and most professionally done shows. The Lab Theatre, recently renamed in honor of E. Melba Johnson Kirkpatrick, was built as part of the Fine Arts construction in 1971. Emphasis centered on the fine art festival each March, bringing such notable artists as Helen Hayes, Uta Hagen and John Houseman to the campus.

Dr. Tucker was succeeded by Dr. John Ficca as the Director of the School of Drama in 1968. And while Dr. Carole Brandt, Dr. Clair Myers and Dr. Jared Brown, the present director, have held the position since then, Dr. Ficca remains a full-time professor and directs at least once every year. In fact, John Ficca has been on Wesleyan’s faculty for 36 years, longer than any other University employee. Dr. Ficca’s playwright talents have brought productions such as For Love of Havan, Safe Like A Sparrowhawk and Friday in America to the McPherson stage.

Jared Brown recently published articles about theatre history in American Theatre and The Wisconsin Academy Review. His book The Fabulous Lunts received the Barnard Hewitt award in 1986 as the year's outstanding book about the theatre. Nancy B. Loitz, who directs the Music Theatre program, has directed at the Minnesota Repertory Theatre and the Huron Playhouse; she also serves on the regional executive board of the American College Theatre Festival. Jean Millian, who directs the Dance program, has choreographed works for many groups, including her own dance company. Beverly Norcross, the School's costume designer, has worked primarily as a costumer in the professional world in the recent past, winning an Emmy award in 1987. Curtis C. Trout, set designer, intersperses professional work with his teaching; he recently designed the sets for a production of Die Fledermaus by the Tri-Cities Opera Company. Ken Johnson, the Technical Director at Illinois Wesleyan, has served as set and lighting designer for the Peninsula Players the past several summers.

Outstanding recognition has been provided over the years to a number of graduates and productions of Wesleyan's School of Drama. The Irene Ryan national acting award, the top collegiate acting award, was won by Andrea Huber, '81. In 1984 IWU's production of Studs Terkel's WORKING won the American College Theatre Festival Award. It opened the regional finalists performances at the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington, DC.

Graduates continue to succeed in all avenues of the profession, be they in major metropolitan areas, regional theatres, university and high school teaching or film and television, and in performance, writing or varied technical areas.

Their accomplishments are reflected in the directory information. We hope you will enjoy this recap over the years. The information is accurate to the best of our knowledge. Please share corrections with the IWU Alumni Office (309-556-3091) or the School of Theatre Arts (309-556-3011), P.O. Box 2900, Bloomington, IL 61702-2900.

The Alumni Office would like to thank Heather Siemsen '93 Theatre Arts major and Tariq Khan '93 Theatre Arts and English major for their help in coordinating the Directory for the School of Theatre Arts. We especially hope you enjoy the photograph taken of those alumni who attended the Drama Reunion on June 13, 1992.
