Founders’ Day Convocation (2002 Program)

Illinois Wesleyan University

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.iwu.edu/founders_day_docs

Recommended Citation
Founders’ Day. 4.
https://digitalcommons.iwu.edu/founders_day_docs/4

This Article is protected by copyright and/or related rights. It has been brought to you by Digital Commons @ IWU with permission from the rights-holder(s). You are free to use this material in any way that is permitted by the copyright and related rights legislation that applies to your use. For other uses you need to obtain permission from the rights-holder(s) directly, unless additional rights are indicated by a Creative Commons license in the record and/or on the work itself. This material has been accepted for inclusion by faculty at Illinois Wesleyan University. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@iwu.edu.
©Copyright is owned by the author of this document.
Illinois Wesleyan University

FOUNDERS’ DAY CONVOCATION

Celebrating The Ames Library Opening

Shirk Center
Performance Arena
February 11, 2002
7:30 p.m.
PROGRAM

President Minor Myers, jr., Presiding
Professor Julie D. Prandi, Mace Bearer

Prelude and Processional
Illinois Wesleyan University Wind Ensemble
(please stand)
Professor Vadim Mazo, Guest Conductor
Proud Heritage
William Latham (b. 1917)

Invocation (remain standing)
Dennis E. Groh
University Chaplain

President’s Welcome
Minor Myers, jr.
President, Illinois Wesleyan University

Trustee’s Welcome
Craig C. Hart
President, Board of Trustees

Awarding of Honorary Degree
President Myers
John Hoyer Updike
Janet M. McNew
Provost and Dean of the Faculty

Remarks
John Updike
“Readings Not Totally Unsuitable to Founders’ Day”

Alma Wesleyana (please stand and join in singing)
NATIONAL HYMN
George William Warren (1828-1902)

From hearts aflame, our love we pledge to thee,
Where’er we wander, over land or sea;
Through time unending, loyal we will be—
True to our Alma Mater, Wesleyan.

When college days are fully past and gone,
While life endures, from twilight gleam til dawn,
Grandly thy soul shall with us linger on—
Star-crowned, our Alma Mater, Wesleyan.

—Professor W. E. Schultz (1935)

Benediction (remain standing)
Chaplain Groh

Recessional (remain standing)
Illinois Wesleyan University Wind Ensemble
Procession of the Nobles
Nicolai Rimsky-Korsakov (1844-1908)
arr. Erik W. G. Leidzén
One of America’s foremost men of letters, John Hoyer Updike is a disciplined writer who limits himself to polishing just 300 words per day. But how those words add up. Since his first collection of poetry, The Carpentered Hen, appeared in 1958, Updike has enjoyed a distinguished career, producing more than 50 volumes of poetry, short fiction, essays and criticism, memoir, children’s books, novels, and a play.

Updike’s early aspiration was to become an artist, and the summa cum laude Harvard graduate drew cartoons for the Lampoon and received a fellowship to study at the Ruskin School of Drawing and Fine Art in Oxford. But the English major’s true love was books and writing, and he accepted a staff position at The New Yorker, where he enjoyed great popularity as the magazine’s “Talk of the Town” reporter. When he resigned several years later to pursue a career as a serious writer, Updike promised himself one book per year—a promise he kept. “My favorite theater is the lap of a good reader,” Updike told one interviewer.

After a short story collection (The Same Door) and first novel (The Poorhouse Fair) debuted in 1959, Updike received a Guggenheim to help him complete a novel for which he would become most famous: Rabbit, Run (1960), about an ex-high school athlete who struggles, following his fifteen minutes of fame, through a mid-life crisis in Middle America. That book launched a series unique to American literature, with Updike revisiting Harry “Rabbit” Angstrom approximately every decade, and, in the process, commenting on changes in American culture over the course of some 40 years. Rabbit, Redux (1971) documented the turbulent Vietnam War years, while Rabbit is Rich (1981), which won the Pulitzer Prize, detailed life in the age of heightened consumerism. The fourth and projected final installment, Rabbit at Rest (1990), followed “Rabbit” into retirement (and won a second Pulitzer for Updike), but the character proved so popular that Updike resurrected him for readers in “Rabbit Remembered” in Licks of Love (2001), where characters recall Harry fondly in a fictional postscript.

Updike is also well known for two additional series: three volumes about the comically longsuffering Jewish writer Henry Bech, and three novels in which he explored Nathaniel Hawthorne’s story of adultery in The Scarlet Letter from the perspective of the philandering minister (A Month of Sundays, 1975), the cuckolded husband and man of science (Roger’s Version, 1986), and the unfaithful wife (S., 1988)—thereby underscoring the archetypal power of the adulterous triad in American culture.

Innovation has marked Updike’s career, and a 1963 tribute to his father, The Centaur, won the National Book Award for the way it boldly combined myth on the surface alongside contemporary narrative. With Couples (1968), Updike was among the first American writers to incorporate gritty sexual language and descriptions into a literary narrative of wife-swapping in what Time magazine (in depicting him on its cover) termed a “post-pill paradise.” A later novel, The Witches of Eastwick (1984), remains one of only a handful of successful attempts by Americans to write in a magical realist mode, and inspired a popular film adaptation. Since then, every Updike book has been an experiment, an adventure.
From a 1931 booklet of pen sketches of Illinois Wesleyan University