TRACY KIDDER

Pulitzer Prize-winning author, journalist, and Vietnam War veteran Tracy Kidder has a noted, distinctively textured hands-on research style, devoting countless hours to careful research and thousands of handwritten pages to on-site observations.

For his acclaimed 2003 publication Mountains Beyond Mountains: The Quest of Dr. Paul Farmer, A Man Who Would Cure the World, Mr. Kidder crisscrossed the globe with Dr.

Farmer, traveling from New York City to Siberia, Boston to Haiti, and chronicling the unconventional physician's inspiring work as founder of the not-for-profit Partners In Health in Haiti, an organization dedicated to improving international health care. Illinois Wesleyan was pleased to feature the book in the Summer Reading Program for the Class of 2011, who participated in small group intellectual conversations with faculty, staff, students, and alumni during orientation week.

With the exception of his exploration of Dr. Farmer's extraordinary work, Mr. Kidder has focused his research on the daily lives of ordinary people and places. His books range widely in subject and scope; Among Schoolchildren (1989) tells the story of a classroom of fifth-graders and their teacher, while House (1985) satirically depicts the construction of a residential home in Massachusetts.

A prolific writer, Mr. Kidder is well known for The Soul of a New Machine (1981), which earned him both the Pulitzer Prize and the National Book Award in 1982. He is the author of six other books, including his most recent, My Detachment (2005), a personal memoir of his experiences in Vietnam for which he was awarded a Bronze Star. For his works, Mr. Kidder has received multiple honors, such as the Robert F. Kennedy Award and the Ambassador Book Award in 1990, and the Sarah Josepha Hale Award in 1998. He contributes regularly to the New Yorker, Atlantic Monthly, and The New York Times Book Review.

Born in New York City in 1945 and raised in Oyster Bay, Long Island, Mr. Kidder graduated from Harvard College in 1967. He earned a Masters in Fine Arts degree from the University of Iowa and participated in its prestigious Writers' Workshop. Mr. Kidder now lives with his wife in Massachusetts and Maine.
