Alzheimer’s prevalence

5.3 million Americans has been diagnosed with Alzheimer’s disease

⅔ of people with Alzheimer’s are women

6th leading cause of death in the US

By 2025, over 7 million people are expected to be living with Alzheimer’s

An estimated $226 billion will be spent to care for people with Alzheimer’s and other dementias in 2015
What is Alzheimer’s Dementia?

Alzheimer’s is the most common form of dementia

Slow onset and progressive worsening of the disease

Amyloid plaques and neurofibrillary tangles are key features

The most common symptom is memory loss that becomes debilitating
Communication and Alzheimer’s

Communication ability gradually diminishes in people with AD

AD affects each person’s communication ability differently

Communication changes may include:

- Repeating words
- Easily losing the train of thought
- Reverting back to native language
- Speaking illogically
Communication tips

Be patient

Offer comfort

Avoid criticizing or correcting

Avoid arguing

Limit distractions
Communication strategies

Introduce yourself

Keep it simple

Speak slowly and patiently

Turn questions into answers

Be positive, not negative
Reminiscing: Focus on Yesteryear

“So long as the memory of certain beloved friends lives in my heart, I shall say life is good.” --Helen Keller

I FEEL BAND OF LOVE
Empathy
Empathy versus Sympathy

Complex, multidimensional phenomenon; a human trait, a professional state, a communication process, caring, a special relationship

Ability ‘to sense another's private world as if it were your own, but without ever losing the “as if” quality’

Awareness and insight into feelings, emotions, behavior of another person and their meaning and significance

Feelings of pity and sorrow for someone else's misfortune

An understanding (common feeling) between people
Types of Empathy

Cognitive: knowing how the other person feels and what they might be thinking

Emotional: Feeling physically along with another person, as though their emotions were contagious; makes someone well-attuned to another person’s inner emotional world

Compassionate (Empathic concern): Not only understanding a person’s predicament & feeling with them, but being spontaneously moved to help, if needed
What Makes Empathy for People with Alzheimer’s Difficult?

Core values of self-sufficiency, independence, rationality threatened

In social interactions “personhood” is diminished by ignoring the person with Alzheimer’s, because their presence is discomforting or awkward or because it is assumed they cannot speak for themselves

Persons with Alzheimer’s:

- have come to represent a kind of ‘death in life’, reminding us of the certainty & uncontrollability of our own personal deaths

- are often seen as a “category”; they are ‘Alzheimer-ed’, subtly enabling those around them to avoid an anxiety producing encounter with their “otherness”
Person-centered Care for Those with Alzheimer’s

Challenge is to see each individual as a complete person with strengths and abilities; a person capable of well-being

Care-partner insights to “ill-being” as form of communication of unmet needs;

- Frustration
- Being overwhelmed or withdrawn
- Behavioral expressions of anxiety or anger

Aim: To deeply know each person and support his or her success and well-being
Empathy for Caregivers

Types of Change / Loss

Partnership / role within the marriage
Intimacy & sexuality
Coping with:
  - Relocation of spouse or S.O.
  - Death of spouse, or S.O.
Empathy for Caregivers

“Alzheimer’s causes a profound loss - that of the marital partner.... While spouses may still feel their old bond in the disease’s earlier stages, once it progresses, that connection is lost too.... It’s not sex as much as special friendships, such as being held at night, that the well spouses miss most”

The issue of caring for a spouse is never in doubt; the issue of caring for one’s self is...
“An Open Letter to My Spouse” (Fitzgerald, 1999)

A document that addresses issue of “permission” to seek relationships outside of “but significantly compromised mentally or physically,”

Designed to be reviewed & signed jointly; Acknowledges love & commitment partners have for each other

Allows for open dialogue between spouses

“please find someone you like who will be available to provide the emotional, intellectual & physical support & companionship that I then cannot provide you”

Could, with clergy involvement, open possibility of new forms of pastoral counseling
