HONORS DAY CONVOCATION

April 16, 2003

Westbrook Auditorium–Presser Hall
11:00 a.m.

Carolyn Nadeau
Associate Professor of Hispanic Studies

*Recipient of the 2003 Award
For Teaching Excellence*

When Carolyn Nadeau wanted her students to understand the way in which Miguel de Cervantes synthesizes past traditions in Don Quixote, she had them listen to techno-pop star Moby. That got their attention, forcing them to consider what it means to take past conventions and use them to create something new.

Using Moby's music to teach Don Quixote is but one example of the way in which Nadeau brings material to life for her students. In all of her courses, Nadeau relies on what she terms "authentic material" — video clips, the Internet, music, advertisements, guest speakers, and personal accounts.

"To realize my teaching goals in language classes, I create an environment in which students feel comfortable expressing themselves in spite of any language limitations," she says.

In all her classes, Nadeau aims "to expose students to diverse ways of thinking about the world and to respect the multitude of communities that form our global community."

When Nadeau was named the winner of the 2003 DuPont Award, Illinois Wesleyan Provost Janet McNew called her a "born teacher" who "seems to regard teaching as an energizing opportunity for learning and to consider the activity of learning together as a privilege for herself as for the students."

A member of the Illinois Wesleyan faculty since 1994, Nadeau received her B.A. from the University of Virginia and spent one of her undergraduate years on a study abroad program at the University of Madrid. That experience had a lasting impact. She served as study abroad coordinator at Illinois Wesleyan for two years and was the director of Illinois Wesleyan's inaugural London Program in 2000. She remains passionate about the desirability for all students to study abroad.

"The experience teaches them about the world and its people and helps them gain more mature perspectives on their own role in both their local and global communities," she says.

After graduating from Virginia, Nadeau returned to Madrid to pursue her master's degree from the New York University in Madrid program. She earned the Ph.D. at Penn State where her dissertation focused on Cervantes' use of the classical female characters that are cited in a single sentence of Don Quixote's prologue. Her research on this topic would eventually result in her book, Women of the Prologue: Imitation, Myth, and Magic in Don Quixote, which was published in 2002 by the Bucknell University Press.

In addition to language courses in which she encourages students to appreciate the value of competence in a second language, Nadeau teaches courses on culture and literature, including a senior seminar on Don Quixote. She has written on mythological female figures in the comedia and the role of the wife and mother in sixteenth-century advice manuals. Nadeau is researching food presentation in Golden Age texts and has published several papers on culinary issues. She developed and taught a Gateway Course entitled "Are We What We Eat: Food, Identity and Culture."

An active participant in both the University community and the Bloomington/Normal community, Nadeau has developed a new course to be taught in the May Term that will involve her students in community activities. Students in her course, "Medical Spanish and Cultural Competency for Health Care," will not only spend time in the classroom, but they will also work as interpreters at the Community Health Care Clinic and as translators for the Public Health Department.

For her dedication to the ideals and philosophy of higher education and the liberal arts, Professor Carolyn Nadeau is recognized with the University's highest teaching honor.

*This program is dedicated to the Class of 2003
and
to students who have earned scholastic and activity honors.*

Presiding—Carl W. Dowdy '03, Class President
