New International Cooperations

IWU is going to China!

This past June, Provost Jonathan Green, his wife Lynn Buck, and Professor Teddy Amoloza traveled to Hong Kong and Guangzhou, China, to finalize new international partnerships. IWU and Lingnan University in Hong Kong have agreed to exchange students on study abroad programs, and Lingnan is anxious to host IWU faculty as visiting scholars and teachers. IWU and Sun Yet-sen University in Guangzhou are exploring future faculty collaborations.

In Hong Kong, Provost Green and Professor Amoloza were the guests of Professor William Lee, Lingnan’s vice president and registrar, and the staff of the Office of Mainland and International Programs. While at Lingnan, Provost Green signed a Memorandum of Understanding, which provides for the student exchange. The agreement also invites IWU faculty to teach at Lingnan, either during a sabbatical or over a summer. Faculty benefits would include free airfare for the faculty member, free lodging for the faculty and his/her family, and a monthly stipend. Faculty interested in more information should contact Professor Amoloza (tamoloza@iwu.edu).

From Hong Kong, Provost Green and Professor Amoloza traveled to Sun Yet-sen University in Guangzhou, China. IWU signed an agreement of cooperation with Sun Yet-sen in February 2012; this summer’s visit explored specific areas of collaboration. There, they met with the Dean of the School of Chinese as a Second Language to discuss Sun Yet-sen faculty perhaps teaching Chinese at IWU; and with Professor Chang Chenguang, the Dean of the School of Foreign Languages, and Professor Dai Fan, the Chair of Department of English, to explore the possibility of Sun Yet-sen students studying at IWU starting in spring 2013.

While traveling, the IWU group also had the chance to connect with several of IWU’s Chinese students. In Guangzhou, they were joined by IWU alumnus Tengfei Adam Guo (’10); and after the university visits, including one to Beijing Union University, the group met up with current IWU student Yelei Matt Kong and alumni Chao Ren (’11) and Taole Reggie Zhu (’11). Together, they toured Tiananmen Square and the Forbidden City, and visited the Great Wall of China with Chao Ren.

Technos Celebrates 50 Years

Technos International College, which hosts an IWU faculty member and several students each summer for the Technos International Week, celebrated its 50th anniversary this summer.

Participating in the 2012 International Week were Professor Edgar Lehr (biology), and students Brad Gresik, Audrey Ito, Samantha Reiter, and Rosa Rivera. Joining them for part of the anniversary celebration was Provost Jonathan Green.

The Technos International Week brings students and faculty from IWU, Bates, Carleton, Hobart & William Smith, Hope, and McKendree Colleges, in addition to groups from New Zealand and England, for a two-week program intended to foster international exchange and understanding. IWU’s participation in the program stems from our long-standing relationship with Dr. Kenji Tanaka and the Tanaka Iueki Educational Trust, which fund Technos International College.

The International Office contacted recent study abroad alumni to ask what they were doing and how they were keeping their international experience alive. The response was incredible—and we’re eager to hear from more of you!

Below are some of the responses.

Megan (Adams) Folkerts (SJF Mexico 2004) — is entering her fourth year of teaching high school Spanish in Fort Collins, Colorado.

Linda Ayagpong (DIS Copenhagen 2008) — is a second-year medical student at the University of Illinois College of Medicine in Peoria.

Coco Bassey (IES Berlin 2009) — Recently completed a master’s degree in Media and Communications through Brandeis University’s Global Studies Program and received an employment offer from Fraunhofer CSE, a German-based research organization in Boston.

Matt Beres (IWU Madrid 2009) — Finds himself living in Charlotte and working in product marketing and product development for the international appliance company Electrolux. He writes, “I find myself using the experiences I gained from studying abroad every day. I work side by side with people from all over the world […] am in constant conversation with co-workers and suppliers in China, Hungary, Sweden, and South America, and frequently travel to places such as Shanghai and Stockholm. The experiences I had and the relationships I formed while studying abroad helped fuel my passion for International Business and lead me to the position I am in today. I can honestly say my study abroad in Madrid was one of the best experiences of my college career and I wish I could do it again!”

Kathryn Breisch (IES Nantes 2011, IES EU 2011) — Will be teaching math in Baltimore, MD, as part of Teach for America.

ChrisBurrichter (IWU Madrid 2006) — Recently visited his Spanish host mother in Madrid, and in October will begin work at Kirkland & Ellis LLP.

Brad Campanell (Arcadia Ireland 2009) — Returned to Ireland last May to perform a saxophone concerto, before visiting IWU study abroad student Courtney Balk in Copenhagen. Next month, he is off to Argentina to visit IWU study abroad student Chloe Staub, before starting chiropractic school at National University in Lombard, IL.

Emily Coles (DIS Copenhagen 2009) — After a year in Bulgaria on a Fulbright Grant, Emily moved to Nairobi, Kenya, where she works for the Danish Refugee Council as a research assistant. Earlier this summer, she conducted interviews and focus groups in Jigjiga, Ethiopia, and is now working on a report on durable solutions for Somali refugees in the Horn of Africa. This fall, she will be continue her studies at the London School of Economics and, after graduation, plans to move to Belgrade, Serbia, to work for an NGO.

Anna Deters (IES Amsterdam 2004) — “How am I keeping my international experience alive? Well, I married my Israeli housemate, who was studying in Amsterdam as well—and just a few weeks ago we had our first baby! We travel to Europe at least once a year and make a special point of visiting Amsterdam and our old neighborhood as often as possible.”

Elizabeth Coomber (DIS 2008) — Completed a master’s degree in International Relations, with a focus on multinational & NGO management and conflict resolution from Syracuse University in December. As part of her graduate program, she studied in London and Strasbourg, and then interned with Amnesty International in Washington, D.C.

Brandon Dorn (IFS Butler England 2009-10) — Is soon to marry IWU study abroad alumna Beth Anne Roberts (IES Freiberg 2006). For their honeymoon, they are planning to travel around my room, and … talk about my experiences in Spain, and my students are eager to learn about studying abroad.

Ayumi Kunihiro (IES Nantes 2010) — Recently finished a seven-week English language program through the Middlebury Language program and is beginning a master’s degree at Rice University in Houston, TX.

Cassie Jordan (SJU Kunning 2010) — Is teaching English in Shenzhen, China.

Hannah Kiefer (IES London 2010) — Works for LCMS (Lutheran Church–Missouri Synod) International in Hong Kong. Hannah invites people who want to learn more to contact her at hannah.kiefer@gmail.com.

Brian Kowalski (IFS Butler Northern Ireland 2008-09) — After four years working in the theatre, Brian has returned to school — specifically, the Navy’s Nuclear Power Training Command (NNPTC). So, in another year or two, he’ll be returning abroad.

Gail Kramer (IWU London 2007) — Will be returning to London in September for a one-year business internship.

Samuel Krueger (IES Nantes 2010) — Starting next month, she begin work as an English teaching assistant in Chalon sur Saône, Burgundy, France.

Ayumi Kunihira (IES Tokyo 2002, Keio University 2004) — Is a Fulbright English Teaching Assistant in the Lalitpur district just outside of Kathmandu, Nepal. Ayumi also volunteers with the English Access Microscholarship Program, a program cosponsored by the Nepal English Language Teachers’ Association (NELTA) and the U.S. Embassy to develop the English language skills of Nepali adolescents while also introducing them to American culture, and with the United States Educational Foundation in Nepal, which works with students seeking to study at American universities.

Natalie Lagatos (IES Barcelona 2011) — “Love my job!” Natalie writes. She teaches high school Spanish in Eastern Kentucky (Appalachia) as part of Teach for America. “I talk to students every day about … how the understanding of a second language gives us greater opportunities and power in society. I have pictures from my study abroad experience up around my room, and … talk about my experiences in Spain, and my students are eager to learn about studying abroad.”

KwanYee Queenie Li (IES London 2009) — Moved back to Hong Kong after graduation to work for a French market research company. Now, she does marketing at a fashion company in Hong Kong.

Evan Lowery (IES Milan 2007) — Was finally able to show his family where he studied abroad and to introduce his family to Italy. Aislinn Lowery (NYU Egypt 2009) — Is a Donor Relations and Special Events Coordinator at Shedd Aquarium in Chicago. As part of her work, she currently co-leads Shedd Aquarium’s Iguana Research in the Bahamas (2012 and 2013) that focus on the endangered rock iguanas inhabiting the Exuma islands and the island of Andros.

Milos Martinov (Pembroke College 2005-06) — Returned to Pembroke College for a master’s degree and is now a development officer for St. Catherine’s College, Oxford. Molly McClay (IWU London 2003) — “Finally made it back to London in 2010, almost seven years after first studying abroad. Marcus Mitchell (Central London 2008) — Is in his second year of a PhD in English at Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, OH, and he plans to London to undertake research for his dissertation. He adds, ‘Whenever someone refers to my resume during an interview, my experience in London usually becomes the focal point of the conversation… I really need to explore that chance to go abroad during my time at IWU.”

Sarah Moir (IES Berlin 2011) — Started an IT job at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor, but is planning to return to Germany for graduate study as soon as possible.

Erin Mol (IES Vienna 2006) — Lives in Paris, France, where she is pursuing a career in opera.

Meghan Mondi (IFS Butler England 2004) — Four years after studying abroad at Rochester College, Meghan returned to complete a master’s degree in modern European history. She is now a senior marketing executive at Hodder Education, a division of the UK’s largest publisher, in London.

Innsbruck, Austria, while working as a military English teacher at Hitlerstrasse High School in Munich. English on the Equator: Stories from Ecuador

By Hilary Anderson

This summer, I spent two months in Ecuador as an English Language teaching assistant. The first half of the internship, I spent in Quito, which was in some ways reminiscent of Spain, where I had studied abroad in 2011. The old part of town looked like a Spanish plaza that had just been dropped on top of a mountain, complete with palm trees and old Catholic cathedrals, whose interiors were encrusted in gold. However, unlike in Barcelona, there were women dressed in indigenous clothing selling handmade souvenirs. I was interested to see the stark contrast between indigenous people and the Spanish architecture.

After about three weeks in Quito, I travelled around as a translator for a close family friend, who is a professor and has done a lot of research on indigenous music in the region of Tena. It was a three hour bus ride from Quito to Tena, which is basically the only industry in Tena. They also had written a book about the traditional music of the Amazon Kichwa. We spent two days in Tena, which is a city of 30,000 people in the rainforest. I was offered a position to come and work at a local school. I had not planned on being in Quito for two months, but I had learned that no matter what you plan, something different will happen. So, I went back to Quito for a day, said goodbye to my students, and moved to the Amazon rainforest.

I began working as a public school and many of my students were Kichwa. Most were very eager to learn English so that they would be able to work in eco-tourism, which is basically the only industry in Tena. They also wanted to teach them about their culture, including things like how to speak a little bit of Kichwa, or when they were using the school facilities to eat down sugar cane on the school property, they wanted to make sure I got to try it. Outside of school, I became very good friends with some locals.

My most memorable day was when one of my friends took me to the village where he grew up, which was rather difficult to get to. While taking a canoe was an option, he decided we would take a bus instead. We got to the bus station at 4 am, and it caused a lot whispers and glances when I asked for a ticket to such a remote area. After a three hour bus ride, we got to the port, which was really just two buildings and a few canoes that had been pulled up on the beach. After eating breakfast and waiting the 45 minutes for the ferry, we arrived at our destination. When we reached the house, my friend was so excited to show me the project he, his father, and two of his ten siblings had been working on. It was a small, open-air museum that they had started to build, hoping to be able to showcase the various Amazonian cultures, and attract tourists to their village. Unfortunately, many times artifacts are taken from the indigenous people and never given back.

INTERNATIONAL ARRIVALS

Illinois Wesleyan welcomes 26 new international students from 10 countries to campus. IWU now hosts close to 90 students from over 20 countries.

The students began arriving in mid-August, a week before the other first-year students, to give them a chance to settle in and to undergo an orientation to life in the United States and in Bloomington-Normal before diving into “Turning Titan” activities with IWU’s other new students.

Please join us in welcoming the following students to our campus.

Ines Banos Garcia — Spain

Othman Bivulala — Morocco

Shen Yee Chong — Malaysia

Truc Anh Dao — Vietnam

Ouying Do — Vietnam

Yitze Gao — China

Zixiang Geng — China
