Alma Wesleyana
(please stand and join in singing)

From hearts aflame, our love we pledge to thee,
Where’er we wander, over land or sea;
Through time unending, loyal we will be—
True to our Alma Mater, Wesleyan.
When college days are fully past and gone,
While life endures, from twilight gleam til dawn,
Grandly thy soul shall with us linger on—
Star-crowned, our Alma Mater, Wesleyan.

—Professor W. E. Schultz (1935)

Benediction (remain standing)
Chaplain Groh

Organ Postlude
Sonata II
Allegro maestoso
Felix Mendelssohn (1809-1847)
Sandra Steingraber ’81

Scientist, poet, author and cancer survivor Sandra Steingraber, a 1981 Illinois Wesleyan graduate, is an internationally recognized expert on the environmental links to cancer.

Currently a visiting professor at Cornell University, she is the author of a new book, “Having Faith: An Ecologist’s Journey to Motherhood,” which will be published in October. In it, she relates the month-by-month story of her own pregnancy and the transformation of the mother’s body to nourish and protect the new life. At the same time, she shows the hazards threatening each stage of development, including the breast-feeding relationship between mothers and their newborns.

Steingraber’s 1997 book, “Living Downstream: An Ecologist Looks at Cancer and the Environment,” presents cancer as a human rights issue. It was the first to bring together data on toxic releases—now finally made available under right-to-know laws—with newly released data from U.S. cancer registries. “Living Downstream” has won praise from national media, including the Washington Post, the Nation, the Chicago Tribune, Kirkus Reviews and Publishers’ Weekly.

She is also the author of “Post-Diagnosis,” a volume of poetry, and co-author of a work on ecology and human rights in Africa, “The Spoils of Famine.”

In 1997, Steingraber was named a woman of the year by Ms. Magazine and in 1998 received from the Jenifer Altman Foundation the first annual Altman Award “for the inspiring and poetic use of science to elucidate the causes of cancer.”

Steingraber has keynoted conferences on human health and the environment throughout the U.S. and Canada, including the First World Conference on Breast Cancer held at Queen’s University in Kingston, Ontario, and has been invited to lecture at many university campuses, medical schools and research centers. She is recognized for her ability to serve as a two-way translator between the cancer research community and the community of women cancer activists and is active with the Women’s Community Cancer Project of Cambridge, Mass.

Steingraber earned her master’s degree in English from Illinois State University and her doctorate in biology from the University of Michigan. She has taught biology at Columbia College in Chicago, held visiting fellowships at a number of universities, and served on President Bill Clinton’s National Action Plan on Breast Cancer, administered by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.
Karen Zander ’70

Karen Zander is a Boston-area nurse and entrepreneur who founded the Center for Nursing Case Management, an international health-care consulting company with clients in the U.S., Canada, Australia, England and Spain. In that role, Zander has made contributions to nursing education practice, research and administration. Her approach to case management for patients focuses on the multidisciplinary needs of clients and patient outcomes, making accountability a focus of health care.

As principal and co-owner of the Center for Nursing Case Management, Zander is a consultant and educator to hospitals, physicians, health care systems, software, pharmaceutical and consulting companies for the development of tools, roles and systems that support provider-side control of cost and quality.

Zander, who received her master’s degree in psychiatric and mental health nursing in 1974 from Boston University, has been certified since 1981 as a clinical specialist in adult psychiatric and mental health nursing and maintains a private practice in disease management of chronic conditions.

Zander worked from 1970 to 1989 for the New England Medical Center Hospitals in Boston and founded the Center for Nursing Case Management in 1987 in conjunction with the New England Medical Center. It became an independent firm in 1991. In 1996 she was named one of 21 “cutting edge” leaders by Hospital & Health Networks, a trade magazine.

A native of Park Ridge, Ill., Zander received Illinois Wesleyan’s Distinguished Award for Excellence in Nursing in 1995 and was IWU’s Distinguished Young Alumna in 1980.

Daniel F. Bassill ’68

In 1972, when 1968 Illinois Wesleyan graduate Daniel Bassill was an advertising executive at Montgomery Ward in Chicago, he volunteered to tutor one fourth-grader living in a housing project. His life hasn’t been the same since.

Soon he had volunteered to head a tutoring program at work, managing hundreds of volunteers and students in the Cabrini-Green Tutoring Program, Inc., from 1975 to 1992 as part of the retailer’s volunteer effort.

In 1992, Bassill formed Cabrini Connections, a nonprofit group to help hundreds of other groups connect with children in other neighborhoods. Cabrini Connections not only connects kids with mentors, it also runs motivation programs, organizes field trips to colleges and businesses, enlists corporations, hosts conferences at which tutor/mentor programs can share information, publishes newsletters and directories, stages mentor recruiting fairs, and runs a library of information on tutoring.

A component of Cabrini Connections, the Tutor/Mentor Connection, was cited as an example of “innovative community building” in the 1999-2000 Illinois Kids Count report published by Voices for Illinois Children. Bassill organized the first Chicago Citywide Volunteer Recruitment Campaign in 1995 and has led it since.
Arthur J. Naparstek ’60

A 1960 Illinois Wesleyan graduate, Arthur J. Naparstek has served since 1983 as the Grace Longwell Coyle Professor of Social Work at the Mandel School of Applied Social Science at Case Western Reserve University. He has devoted more than 25 years to initiatives for urban policy, revitalization and change, especially at the neighborhood level.

As director of the Cleveland Foundation Commission on Poverty, he helped produce the 1992 report on the Cleveland Community-Building Initiative. That research in urban and neighborhood policy has resulted in national legislation aimed at improving conditions in American cities, as well as serving as a curriculum for training residents and public housing in community building.

Naparstek is currently senior vice president and director for United Jewish Communities’ Israel and Overseas Pillar, directing the entity through which the Jewish Federations of North America express their collective responsibility in Israel and other countries where Jewish needs exist.

In 1994 and again in 1998, Naparstek was appointed by President Bill Clinton to serve on the board of directors of the Corporation for National Service, which supports public-private partnerships that provide opportunities for Americans of all ages to help communities meet critical challenges in the areas of education, public safety, human needs and the environment.

Under President Jimmy Carter, Naparstek was appointed to the President’s National Commission on Neighborhoods as well as the Task Panel on Community Support Systems of the President’s Commission on Mental Health.

With a master’s degree in social work from New York University and a doctorate from the Florence Heller School of Advanced Studies at Brandeis, Naparstek is the co-author of two books and has written more than 100 articles and monographs for a variety of publications, professional journals and textbooks.

Jack Snyder ’52

Since the age of 18, when he developed his first subdivision of 10 acres in east Bloomington, Jack Snyder has been shaping the Twin Cities. It is estimated that, in his 50-year career, Snyder has developed nearly 9 percent of the cities’ 34 square miles.

A 1952 Illinois Wesleyan graduate, Snyder’s projects have become progressively grander in scale over the years, ranging from the Howard Johnson’s Motor Lodge (1964) to the Radisson Hotel (1996); from the Oakwoods development (1976) to the Fox Creek subdivision intermingled with an 18-hole Arnold Palmer golf course (1996); and from the six-unit Reinthaler Apartments (built in 1958) to the 392 units of Normal’s Ironwood Gardens apartments (1996).

Snyder has a strong sense of community spirit, and many local causes have been assisted through the efforts of Snyder or those of one of his companies. The American Red Cross, United Way of McLean County, American Cancer Society, the Children’s Foundation, the Baby Fold, Muscular Dystrophy Association, First Christian Church, and many more have benefited. Rather than simply open the addition to the Radisson Hotel last spring, actor Bob Newhart was brought in for a benefit event that sent $75,000 to the Susan G. Komen Race for the Cure Fund.

With land donated by the City of Bloomington, the Snyder Corp. developed the Wojahn subdivision and donated it to Habitat for Humanity, providing new housing for 27 families that might not otherwise have been able to afford a home.
