*Jared Brown
Professor of Theatre Arts
Director, School of Theatre Arts
Recipient of 1997 DuPont Award for Teaching Excellence*

"I love the academic theatre," said Jared Brown, professor and director of Illinois Wesleyan University's School of Theatre Arts, "and I'm very pleased with the [career] choice I made."

Brown's skills at his chosen career--teaching theatre arts--has netted him Illinois Wesleyan University's top teaching award for 1997, the DuPont Award for Teaching Excellence.

Brown, who has been teaching for about 30 years, said: "A good teacher has a love for his or her discipline, students, and the academic life. A good teacher is curious, always attempting to learn more. And, of course, the teacher wants to share his views, his knowledge, and his passions with students. But, in the best of times, that's a reciprocal process, for the students share as well, and, in some mysterious way, we come to enlighten and inspire one another."

Brown's approach to directing plays offers insights into his teaching philosophy. As a director, his goal is to work with each actor on an individual basis.

"That means finding what motivates each actor," he explained, "and what can help to elicit the best performance from that actor. Similarly, as a teacher, I try to discover how each student can be stimulated to produce his or her best work."

Writing is an integral part of Brown's approach to teaching.

"As a writer," he said, "I'm not interested in repeating what others have done. I write about areas that excite me and fill a need."

Brown was spurred to write "The Theatre in America During the Revolution," published in 1995 by Cambridge University Press, because he couldn't find adequate sources for students to use for research papers in various theatre history courses. He also is the author of "The Fabulous Lunts: A Biography of Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne" (1986), and "Zero Mostel: A Biography" (1989).

Brown was on the faculty of Western Illinois University from 1965 to 1989, when he came to Illinois Wesleyan. He has taught courses on theatre history, directing, theories of acting and directing, and play writing at IWU. Every other year, he takes a travel course to London and Stratford, England.

An accomplished director, last summer Brown directed Broadway, television, and film actor James Sutorius, a 1967 IWU graduate, in a production of Herb Gardner's comedy-drama, "A Thousand Clowns" at IWU's McPherson Theatre. During the summer of 1995, he directed famed actor John Randolph in his Tony Award-winning role in Neil Simon's play, "Broadway Bound." Brown has directed 13 plays at IWU, ranging from modern musical comedies to Greek tragedies.

He earned a bachelor of fine arts degree in drama from Ithaca College in 1960, a master of arts degree in theatre from San Francisco State College in 1962, and a doctorate in theatre from the University of Minnesota in 1967.

Brown grew up around show business. His father, John, was a radio actor, performing as many as 25 shows a week on various networks with entertainment legends like Fred Allen and Jack Benny. For a brief period, starting when Jared was about age 10, he and his father had their own radio program, "Barnaby and Mr. O'Malley." As a teenager, Jared also worked on "The Life of Riley," on radio, then on television as a friend of Riley's son. He also acted on other national radio and television programs, including: Lux Radio Theatre, Ozzie and Harriet, and Lassie.
