National Hymn

George William Warren
(1828-1902)

From hearts aflame, our love we pledge to thee,
Where’er we wander, over land or sea;
Through time unending, loyal we will be—
True to our Alma Mater, Wesleyan.
When college days are fully past and gone,
While life endures, from twilight gleam til dawn,
Grandly thy soul shall with us linger on—
Star-crowned, our Alma Mater, Wesleyan.

Rebecca Skloot

Author of The Immortal Life of Henrietta Lacks, journalist, teacher

The author of the 2010 New York Times best seller The Immortal Life of Henrietta Lacks, Rebecca Skloot has explored a wide range of topics such as the moral and social implications of science research, through her narrative science writing. Her work has appeared in numerous publications.

The Immortal Life of Henrietta Lacks, Ms. Skloot’s debut book, was chosen as the best book of 2010 by more than 60 media outlets, including Entertainment Weekly, USA Today, The Oprah Magazine, Los Angeles Times, National Public Radio, People Magazine, New York Times and US News and World Report. The book, which is being translated into more than 25 languages, also received the Chicago Tribune Heartland Prize for Nonfiction, the National Academies of Science Best Book of the Year Award, the American Association for the Advancement of Science Best Young Adult Book Award, the Welcome Trust Book Prize, and two Goodreads Choice Awards for Best Nonfiction Book of the Year and Best Debut Author of the Year.

Immortal Life, completed after a decade of research and writing, chronicles the story of Henrietta Lacks, a poor tobacco farmer whose cancer cells were used for scientific research without her or her family’s knowledge. Despite the contribution Henrietta's cells made to numerous scientific advancements, even after her death, neither Henrietta or her family were credited or compensated. It is this discovery that inspired Ms. Skloot to found the Henrietta Lacks Foundation, which strives to provide financial assistance to other disadvantaged and unacknowledged contributors to science. A portion of the proceeds from her book goes to the Foundation, which has been featured in The New York Times.

Ms. Skloot has a bachelor’s of science degree in biological sciences and a master’s degree in creative nonfiction. She worked in emergency rooms, neurology labs, veterinary morgues and martini bars to finance her education. She has taught creative writing and science journalism at the University of Memphis, the University of Pittsburgh, and New York University.

A guest editor of The Best American Science Writing 2011, Ms. Skloot is also a contributing editor at Popular Science Magazine, and has worked as a correspondent for WNYC’s Radiolab and PBS’s NOVA ScienceNOW. She has been featured on several television shows as well, including CBS Sunday Morning, The Colbert Report and Fox Business News. Ms. Skloot was named One of Five Surprising Leaders of 2010 by the Washington Post. She is currently writing a new book, yet untitled, which focuses on the human-animal bond.
