Richard E. Reeves
Member, Board of Directors
AFRICA UNIVERSITY, ZIMBABWE

Richard Reeves presents an interesting historical connection with Illinois Wesleyan. He is a collateral descendant of Owen T. Reeves (1829-1912), who joined this faculty only four years after the founding of IWU in 1850. Professor Reeves was arguably one of this university's longest-tenured personages, and one who had held more varied positions than any other in Wesleyan's history. Elected a trustee in 1855, he served on the board until his death in 1912. He was also one of the founders of the famed Illinois Wesleyan Law School in 1874, and later became its dean. In his position as president of the Board of Trustees, Judge Reeves was present at the 1898 inauguration of the university's sixth president, Edgar M. Smith, when IWU's first alumnus-bishop, the Rev. Joseph Crane Hartzell of the Class of 1868, welcomed Smith in the name of the alumni.

That occasion provides another historical symmetry, for it was that early alumnus who first had the vision to build a university in Africa--the project for which we honor the descendant of Hartzell's colleague today. Bishop Hartzell, whose 150th birthday will be observed in July, was missionary bishop to Africa at the end of the nineteenth century, and in 1897 he climbed Chiremba Mountain in what is now the modern African country of Zimbabwe to pray for guidance in founding a college there.

Today, almost a century later, it is in large part due to the work of Richard E. Reeves of Decatur, Ill., that Hartzell's dream is about to be realized. Reeves has combined his volunteer enthusiasm with his professional skills as an agricultural engineer specializing in wells and water supply systems into an educational project that will affect the countries and people of Africa for generations to come.

Born on a Central Illinois farm in 1920, Reeves studied architecture and agricultural engineering at the University of Illinois, interrupted by service as a captain in the United States Air Force during World War II. He joined Burks Pumps, Inc., a manufacturer of water pumps in Decatur, Ill., after military service and completion of his degree, retiring as senior vice president after a 38-year career.

His life has been devoted to community and church-related volunteer service, and he has held numerous elected and appointed leadership roles.

It has been his work for the United Methodist Committee on Relief (UMCOR) as a volunteer engineering consultant, however, that has most affected his life. Because of his expertise in water resources, Reeves was assigned to visit Sierra Leone, Liberia, Ghana and Kenya, where he lived among the people in remote regions. His African experiences turned him into an advocate for the needy people of that continent, and his position on the UMC General Board of Higher Education and Ministry as its only engineering-trained member presented a unique opportunity to work toward Hartzell's vision--the founding of Africa University in Old Mutare, Zimbabwe.

Since his election to the General Board in 1984, Reeves has been working with bishops from churches in Angola and Liberia who shared the dream to construct the first United Methodist institution of higher education on the African continent. In late January 1992 that dream was significantly advanced when Africa University was officially chartered by the Zimbabwe government, the culmination of five years of formal negotiations and a $20 million commitment from the church.

When campus construction was begun in March 1992, Reeves, who also chairs the new university's buildings and grounds committee, witnessed the installation of the well and pump that had been his retirement gift six years ago from his Decatur employer--the gift he chose to donate to Africa University.

Gilbert M. Grosvenor

President and Chairman of the Board
THE NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC SOCIETY

Continuing a tradition of family service that began in 1888, Gilbert M. Grosvenor is the fifth-generation of his family to lead the world's largest nonprofit scientific and educational institution. His great-great-grandfather, Gardiner Greene Hubbard, was among the founders of the Society which was established in that year with a timeless goal: to increase and diffuse geographic knowledge. Also among the founders was Professor John Wesley Powell, explorer of the Grand Canyon and Illinois Wesleyan University geology professor. The Society's second president was Grosvenor's great-grandfather, Alexander Graham Bell (1847-1922), inventor of the telephone, whose son-in-law was the first Gilbert Grosvenor.

Born in Washington, D.C., in 1931, Grosvenor was educated at Yale, earning a bachelor's degree in psychology, and joined the Society staff in 1954 as a picture editor, leaving soon after to serve for two years in the U.S. Army's Psychological Warfare Service. He later returned to the Geographic, at first working in the business department.

He was editor of the National Geographic magazine from 1970-1980, traveling worldwide on writing and photography assignments, and earned a National Press Photographers Association Award in 1961 for his coverage of Eisenhower's diplomatic tour of Europe, Asia and Africa in 1959. He was named the Society's fourteenth president in 1980, and since 1966 he has also been a member of its Board of Trustees, becoming chairman in January 1987.

While editor, Grosvenor explored such controversial issues as apartheid, famine, communism, and war in the pages of the Geographic, and has had a major role in the diversification of the Society from a single-magazine organization to a major publisher of books for adults and children. He created World, a magazine for children aged eight to thirteen, as an alternative to television, and he continues to serve as its overall editorial director.

In 1985 he launched the Geography Education Program, a major effort to upgrade geographic education in the classroom. Pledging $4 million a year, the Society has formed a network of educational leaders and public policy-makers, established Summer Geography Institutes at its headquarters in Washington, and worked to develop innovative applications of high technology in the classroom. Together with the National Science Foundation and Technical Research Centers, Inc., the Society has established an information-sharing telecommunications network called "Kids Network."

During Grosvenor's presidency, the Society has added two more magazines and an award-winning cable television program, "National Geographic Explorer."

He has served as vice chairman of the President's Commission on Americans Outdoors, is a member of the Association of American Geographers and a trustee of the New York Zoological Society. He chairs the Foundation Board of the Alexander Graham Bell Association for the Deaf, and is a board member of the National Advisory Board of Citizens for Ocean Law, the National Advisory Board of the American University, and the Washington Cathedral Chapter. He also maintains a number of community, professional and business affiliations. His home is in McLean, VA.
