DONALD H. RUMSFELD

Chairman, Chief Executive Officer, and President
GENERAL INSTRUMENT CORPORATION

Donald H. Rumsfeld is a veteran of more than two decades of federal service in Cabinet, legislative, and diplomatic posts. As a businessman, he has headed a worldwide pharmaceutical company and a company involved in advanced television technologies.

Born in Chicago in 1932, Rumsfeld attended Princeton University and served in the U.S. Navy as flyer from 1954-57, where he was the All-Navy Wrestling Champion. He went to work on Capitol Hill in 1957, during the Eisenhower administration, as an aide to a U.S. Representative from Ohio.

At the age of 30, Rumsfeld was elected in 1962 to the U.S. House of Representatives from Illinois. He was re-elected three times before resigning from the U.S. House in 1969 to join President Richard Nixon's Cabinet as assistant to the president and director of the Office of Economic Opportunity. He served as a counselor to the president and director of the economic stabilization program, a Nixon administration effort to battle inflation, from 1971-72

Rumsfeld was handed a sensitive diplomatic assignment in 1973-74, when he was named U.S. ambassador to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO), the allied coalition established in the post-World War II years as a front-line defense against Soviet expansion in Europe.

Following Nixon's resignation as president in August 1974, as a result of the Watergate scandal, Rumsfeld returned to Washington as a top aide to President Gerald Ford. He headed the Ford transition team and was White House Chief of Staff and a member of the Cabinet in 1974-75.

In 1975 President Ford named Rumsfeld U.S. secretary of Defense, a post he held until 1977. He is the youngest person in U.S. history to serve as defense secretary.

In 1977 President Ford awarded Rumsfeld the Presidential Medal of Freedom, the nation's highest civilian honor.

After two decades in Washington politics, Rumsfeld left the nation's capitol to lecture at Princeton University's Woodrow Wilson School of International Affairs and at Northwestern University's Kellogg Graduate School of Management before launching a second career in business.

From 1977-85 Rumsfeld served as chief executive officer, president, and chairman of G.D. Searle & Co., the worldwide pharmaceutical company based in suburban Chicago. He served as a senior advisor to William Blair & Co. from 1985-90.

Rumsfeld has been chairman and chief executive officer of General Instrument Corporation since October, 1990, and president of General Instrument Corporation since April, 1992. General Instrument Corporation has interests in cable, satellite, land-based, and high-definition television technologies.

Rumsfeld is a director or trustee of several corporations, foundations, and colleges. As a business leader, Rumsfeld has continued to serve on many State and Defense Department advisory boards.

Rumsfeld and his wife, Joyce, married in 1954. They have two daughters, a son, two granddaughters, and a grandson.

Academic Colors and Regalia

Like judicial robes, the garments worn on academic occasions such as today's Commencement derive from the ecclesiastical garb of medieval England. The scholar in the Middle Ages, it must be remembered, was a clerk, and therefore required to wear the clerical gown and tonsure. Certainly, at Oxford and Cambridge, at least in the earliest times, the robes were monastic in origin, although the hood was adapted from a lay garment common to both sexes and all classes.

As early as the fourteenth Century, scholars of certain colleges were required by statute to wear "a decent habit" befitting a clerk and no evidence appears that there was much differentiation among undergraduates, bachelor's, master's and doctoral robes. All were black, commonly of lamb's wool; most were fur-lined for warmth, or at least fur trimmed; and the only mark of difference was in the fuller cut and ankle length of the master's gown. The cope, or closed cape, was also black and followed the style of the everyday mantle of the clergy.

Hoods were worn by all and probably had no academical significance at the beginning. By 1330-40 doctors began to adopt scarlet for their hoods, and by 1500, for their robes, with black retained by the masters of arts and bachelors of divinity. An act of Henry VIII in 1533 ratified the wearing of robes of other colors. Hoods were lined with silk and miniver fur, a custom surviving until the late seventeenth Century, but over the years distinctions were created to identify the various ranks and faculties.

Caps evolved in similar manner. The round velvet cap is still worn today in the full dress of doctors (except doctors in theology); the familiar square, or mortar-board, was copied in the early sixteenth Century from the thirteenth Century cap of the University of Paris. A third style also derives from Paris: a squared cap made by sewing four pieces of cloth with seams producing ridged edges, seen in modern times in the biretta of the clergy and the squared velvet cap of doctors of theology. The "who" and "how" of the wearing of caps produced numerous rulings, restrictions and change.

The Reformation repressed the brilliant silks, gold lace, costly furs and extravagant cut of academic robes, and the sober and more uniform styles are, for the most part, what we see today.

However, the growth of higher education in the United States during the nineteenth Century, when the great land grant colleges and universities were established under the Morrill Act, created a confusion of conflicting styles and colors. The easy identification of one's academic status by means of cut, fabric and color was no longer true.

In 1893 an intercollegiate commission presented a uniform code for caps, gowns and hoods to be worn in the United States. The mortarboard caps are the same for doctoral, master's and baccalaureate degrees, except that doctors' caps may be of velvet and may have a gold tassel. The bachelor's gown is marked by pointed sleeves, reaching to the knee, while the master's sleeve is squared at the ends, and longer. The doctoral robe is fullest, with rounded bell shaped sleeves marked by three velvet stripes.

The greatest symbolism of the academic costume is borne by the hood, which identifies the level of the degree, the faculty (or department of learning) in which it was earned, and the institution which awarded it. The size of the hood, its shape and the width of its velvet trim identify the level of the degree, with doctoral hoods naturally being the fullest, widest and longest. Faculty colors tell us the department. Today's graduates will be wearing white for the College of Liberal Arts, pink for the School of Music, golden yellow for the sciences and brown for the fine arts. Faculty members in the procession may be wearing light blue for education, copper for economics, drab for business and accountancy, orange for engineering, purple for law, lemon for library science, green for medicine, apricot for nursing, dark blue for philosophy, sage green for physical sciences, cream for social sciences and scarlet for theology, among the many available. The colors are mandatory on hoods, but may also be used on the tassels and/or the velvet on doctoral gowns.

The university or college is usually identified by the color of the hood lining. Two colors are frequently used, since there are approximately 2,000 degree-granting institutions in the United States. A few, such as Harvard, Yale, Princeton and the University of Chicago, use a single color. Illinois Wesleyan's green and white was adopted in 1888.

The Illinois Wesleyan University Mace, first carried at the 1969 inauguration of Dr. Robert S. Eckley as fifteenth president of the University, is also a striking symbol of the institution. Made of bronze for power and endurance and of walnut for organic strength, its cupola represents the bell tower of Old North Hall, Wesleyan's first building, which was erected in 1856 and demolished in 1967 to make way for Sheean Library. The bell suggests the Hedding Bell, a campus landmark since 1931, when it was installed on the IWU campus after pealing for generations at Hedding College, now defunct. The staff of the Mace is made from the walnut of Old North Hall, and the names of Wesleyan's presidents are engraved on its bronze base.
