From the editors:

It's been a long year and as is usual, we waited maybe just a little too long before getting going on this thing, at least in terms of getting the magazine out with plenty of time left in the school year. Submissions this year were plentiful and of excellent quality and readability; we've got some scholarly and interesting papers in this volume of the Undergraduate Review, and unfortunately had to turn away some that were almost as good. As the cover might suggest, we think these papers good enough that we all as students could learn something about paper writing from them.
