HONORS DAY 1995

James D. Matthews
Associate Professor of French
Chairperson, Foreign Language Department

"A good teacher today is committed to teaching students rather than just the material," James Matthews said, explaining his teaching philosophy.

"Especially when you teach a foreign language," he added, "you have to establish your students' levels and determine how to bring them to another level. To do this, I think you have to be a student of contemporary culture. That's one of the tools in my tool box. Good teachers need to know what student reference points are."

Today, Illinois Wesleyan University bestows on James Matthews its 1994 DuPont Award for Teaching Excellence, the university's highest teaching honor.

Good teaching, according to Matthews, involves organization, especially at a time when information is so accessible and is proliferating at a rapid pace.

In a spring, 1995, article in Illinois Wesleyan University Magazine, Matthews was asked: "What makes a good teacher?"

"If we give anything to students besides the subject material, it's a sense that learning is fun and healthy," he replied.

In the article, Matthews described one way he gauges his teaching success. "I do think good teachers know when they are teaching well—we have good antennae—and when they are not. Thanks to my students and some hard work, I have had many more good days than bad."

"My definition of a good teaching day," Matthews added, "is one in which I am fed and energized by my students."

Matthews comes from a family of educators. His family on his mother's side were teachers and principals. His grandfather was a school superintendent for 37 years.

"I was naturally drawn to teaching," Matthews said, "not as a profession, but as a way of life."

Matthews discovered French as a youngster in elementary school. By graduate school, Matthews' special interest was 17th century French theatre and dramatists such as Molière, author of the classic comedy, "Tartuffe."

"I'm deeply interested in French culture," Matthews said, "especially as it has been transmitted into other cultures" such as West African and Caribbean literature.

Along those lines, Matthews is studying journals kept by Frenchmen who explored the Mississippi Valley in the late 17th century. Next month, he will embark on a 260-mile bicycle trek from Alton to Kankakee, approximating an Illinois River route taken by the early French explorers, who traveled by canoe.

"The trip," Matthews explained, "combines two of my hobbies—French literature and cycling. During the trip, I'm going to read the explorers' journals and write my own."

Information gathered on the bike trip and in studying the explorers' manuscripts may be incorporated into an IWU "Short Term" course.

Matthews, who joined the IWU faculty in 1986, earned a bachelor of arts degree from Albion College in 1974 and a master of arts degree and doctorate from the University of Michigan in 1977 and 1985, respectively.

Prior to joining the IWU faculty, Matthews was an assistant professor at Ball State University in Muncie, Ind.
