From hearts aflame, our love we pledge to thee,
Where'er we wander, over land or sea;
Through time unending loyal we will be—
True to our Alma Mater, Wesleyan.

When college days are fully past and gone,
While life endures, from twilight dream till dawn,
Grandly thy soul shall with us linger on—
Star-crowned, our Alma Mater, Wesleyan!

—Professor W. E. Schultz
(1887-1964)

Kathleen O’Gorman
Associate Professor of English

When Kathleen O’Gorman thinks about outstanding teachers, she recalls faculty at Marywood College in her hometown of Scranton, Pennsylvania, where she earned undergraduate and graduate degrees in English.

“My teachers at Marywood,” said O’Gorman, an Illinois Wesleyan University associate professor of English, “made teaching look like fun. They had a passion for their work.”

Over the last decade, O’Gorman has shared with IWU students a similar passion for the adventure of teaching fiction, poetry, and drama.

Consequently, IWU today is bestowing on her its 1996 DuPont Award for Teaching Excellence, the university’s highest teaching honor.

O’Gorman’s love of language was sparked, in part, by her father, who enjoyed memorizing and reciting poetry. “He loved poetry—it was in his blood,” O’Gorman said of her father. “And, it’s in my blood, too.”

However, it was a front-porch talk between mother and daughter, the summer following O’Gorman’s graduation from college, that steered her toward a career teaching English at the university level.

“I grew up in a family with six sisters and a brother,” O’Gorman said, “and Marywood was a female institution. The female culture has influenced many of my choices in important ways.”

Many of O’Gorman’s literary heroes are female—writers like Virginia Woolf and Marguerite Duras—but she also has been inspired by male authors like Nobel Laureate Samuel Beckett and James Joyce.

“In different ways,” O’Gorman said of these writers, “they all push the boundaries of what language can do, drawing attention to its limitations. These writers, on the one hand, demonstrate the beauties of language, so that it works like a siren song, and, at the same time, they show the limits of language.”

O’Gorman received a bachelor of arts degree in 1973 and a master’s degree in 1975—both in English—from Marywood. She received a doctorate in English from the University of Notre Dame in 1981. Her dissertation topic was on 20th-century British poet Charles Tomlinson. O’Gorman edited a collection of essays on his work, “Charles Tomlinson: Man and Artist,” published in 1988 by the University of Missouri Press. She is working on a book about Irish writer Samuel Beckett, “Hers Presumably:” Mediations of Desire in Samuel Beckett’s Dramas of Women.

O’Gorman served as a full-time academic advisor to Notre Dame freshmen from 1981-84 and spent a semester in 1984 with Notre Dame’s London-based program. She was a visiting assistant professor at Notre Dame for 18 months before joining the IWU faculty, where she teaches 20th-century British and Irish literature, experimental literature, avant-garde fiction, and drama.

Students, according to O’Gorman, should study English—and other fields of intellectual inquiry—to learn to appreciate, as well as to call into question, the many different kinds of constructs we use to define our world.

“Students should study English,” she said, “so they won’t be victims of every bumper sticker or slogan that comes along. By studying English, students can develop a healthy suspicion of language and how language can be used to manipulate them, as well as appreciate its beauty, its seductions.”
