

Illinois Wesleyan University
Digital Commons @ IWU

John Wesley Powell Student Research
Conference

1993, 4th Annual JWP Conference

May 8th, 9:30 AM - 4:30 PM

An Eye-Opening Exhibition

Mary Lynn Kopetz
Illinois Wesleyan University

Sherilyn McElroy, Faculty Advisor
Illinois Wesleyan University

Follow this and additional works at: <https://digitalcommons.iwu.edu/jwprc>

Kopetz, Mary Lynn and McElroy, Faculty Advisor, Sherilyn, "An Eye-Opening Exhibition" (1993). John Wesley Powell Student Research Conference. 26.
<https://digitalcommons.iwu.edu/jwprc/1993/posters/26>

This Event is protected by copyright and/or related rights. It has been brought to you by Digital Commons @ IWU with permission from the rights-holder(s). You are free to use this material in any way that is permitted by the copyright and related rights legislation that applies to your use. For other uses you need to obtain permission from the rights-holder(s) directly, unless additional rights are indicated by a Creative Commons license in the record and/ or on the work itself. This material has been accepted for inclusion by faculty at Illinois Wesleyan University. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@iwu.edu.

©Copyright is owned by the author of this document.

"AN EYE-OPENING EXHIBITION"

Mary Lynn Kopetz, Departments of History and Graphic Design
Sherilyn McElroy, Faculty Advisor

A gala modern art exhibition in Munich, Germany opened July 19, 1937, which brought together more than 650 important avant-garde paintings and sculptures. However, this massive exhibition compiled by the National Socialist Party, Entartete Kunst ("Degenerate Art", the name under which the work was categorized) was not intended to introduce the public to the virtues of modern art, but was arranged purposefully to inflame them against the works. Works by modern artists were treated not as evidence of individual creativity but as representative of something undesirable--the monstrous offspring of insanity and ineptitude.

The preconceived notion of the nature of art was like a bandage over the Nazis' eyes. They did not want to see that artistic reality can be something other than a realistic representation of an object in physical space. And what the modern artists were describing on their canvases were expressive, subjective concerns--ones that required an evaluation other than a quick glance. They sought to extract the idea, the inner essence, something beyond a realistic surface appearance. They proposed a new perspective and discerned a new reality.

In my project, a series of educational posters, I employ visual design vocabulary and ideology to reflect this theme--the ability to see and experience in a new way. Visual elements I have selected purposefully encourage the viewer to take a closer look and literally see new things. Sometimes it is necessary to find a new perspective in order to see the bigger picture. The Nazis hoped to convince society of the degeneracy of the innovation of modern art, but I hope ultimately to affirm the artists' discovery of their new reality. And I challenge the viewer to reflectively examine my results at the conference.