

Illinois Wesleyan University
Digital Commons @ IWU

---

John Wesley Powell Student Research
Conference

1998, 9th Annual JWP Conference

---

Apr 18th, 11:00 AM - 11:15 AM

The Socio-Linguistics of Ancient Greek Identity: The Meaning of 'Myth'

Esther Condos
Illinois Wesleyan University

Nancy Sultan, Faculty Advisor
Illinois Wesleyan University

Follow this and additional works at: <https://digitalcommons.iwu.edu/jwprc>

---

Condos, Esther and Sultan, Faculty Advisor, Nancy, "The Socio-Linguistics of Ancient Greek Identity: The Meaning of 'Myth'" (1998). John Wesley Powell Student Research Conference. 3.

<https://digitalcommons.iwu.edu/jwprc/1998/oralpres/3>

This Event is protected by copyright and/or related rights. It has been brought to you by Digital Commons @ IWU with permission from the rights-holder(s). You are free to use this material in any way that is permitted by the copyright and related rights legislation that applies to your use. For other uses you need to obtain permission from the rights-holder(s) directly, unless additional rights are indicated by a Creative Commons license in the record and/ or on the work itself. This material has been accepted for inclusion by faculty at Illinois Wesleyan University. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@iwu.edu.

©Copyright is owned by the author of this document.

Oral Presentation 1.3

THE SOCIO-LINGUISTICS OF ANCIENT GREEK IDENTITY: THE MEANING OF 'MYTH'

Esther Condos and Nancy Sultan*
Classical Studies, Illinois Wesleyan University

In Ancient Greece, myth and ritual served as methods by which people developed a sense of belonging. Myths were not merely fantastic stories, but they and their accompanying rituals were regarded as the speaking of ultimate truths by the Ancient Greeks. Indeed, myth and ritual formed the very basis for Greek religion. The linguistics of the word 'myth' itself provides a background that explains the origin of later sources of Greek identity. 'Myth', derived from the Greek verb muō, 'I have my eyes closed, I have my mouth shut', sets up the context of Greek religion by establishing a dichotomy of the sacred, or 'marked' sphere, versus the secular, or 'unmarked' sphere. The sacred sphere is one of exclusivity: a closed group within which there is a sanctity and openness vis-a-vis outsiders to the group. Initiates of this 'marked' sacred group are described as mustes in Ancient Greek. This concept provides the basis of the later ideology that inclusion and group identity are central to the Greek polis 'city-state' itself. Thus, the socio-linguistics of 'myth' actually serves as the basis of establishing how people identify themselves as a group.