IWU's Presence Felt At SIU Med School

BLOOMINGTON, Ill. -- When Southern Illinois University School of Medicine at Springfield conferred doctor of medicine degrees on its Class of 2002 last month, Illinois Wesleyan University undergraduates comprised 12 percent of the graduating class.

Not only were eight of the 67 new physicians members of IWU's Class of 1998, but all eight had majored in biology as undergraduates.

The new M.D.s are:

- Jeremiah S. Anders who will enter a combined internal medicine and pediatrics residency at the OSF St. Francis Medical Center in Peoria;
- Annabelle Abellera Apostol who will enter an internal medicine residency at the Evanston Northwestern Healthcare and McGaw Medical Center Northwestern University in Evanston;
- Brian P. Jokhy who will enter an internal medicine residency at the Medical College of Wisconsin in Milwaukee;
- Mettisa R. McLeod of Quincy who will enter a family practice residency at Memorial Hospital in South Bend, Ind.;
- Kristofer J. Mitchell who will enter a general surgery residence at SIU's affiliated hospitals in Springfield;
- Matthew M. Reichert who enter an internal medicine residency at the University of Kentucky;
- Stacy L. Sattovia who will enter an internal medicine residency at the University of Iowa in Iowa City;
- Laura Morris Winkleman who will enter a family practice residency at the Deaconess Hospital in Evansville, Ind.
