The world of athletics continues to provide the United States with a variety of memorable moments; especially with regards to college athletics. Throughout the past century, athletes have awed the American public with their amazing skills, while often overlooking the coaches who have directed them along the way. This poster presentation will represent the careers of female collegiate coaches, who coach women's teams at the Division III level. The poster illustrates the responsibilities that accompany the coaching profession, while providing insight into some of the positive and negative aspects of being a female coach at the Division III level.
