Event: The Underground Series Spring 2002 presents mind reader Christopher Carter

Date: March 2 (Saturday)

Time: 8 p.m.

Location: Center Court, IWU Hansen Student Center, 300 E. Beecher St., Bloomington

Admission: Free, open to the public

Background: Now having performed throughout the United States, Christopher Carter is quickly being recognized as one of the nation's foremost mind readers. Carter's performance combines fast-paced humor with unbelievable 'psychic' stunts, that will lead the audience on a fascinating tour through the mysteries of the mind.

Carter will probe your thoughts and influence actions you were convinced were your own free will. He will guess your Social Security number, license number, and even numbers on a dollar bill in your pocket. He will duplicate your signature exactly-- even though his eyes will have been sealed shut.

At the age of eight, Carter, IWU class of 1987, was allowed to sit in on an uncle's late night poker game. There, observing the players' body language, Carter first realized that people can subconsciously broadcast their thoughts using means other than words. From that point on, Carter became fascinated with the power of suggestion, "people reading," and what some people call E.S.P.

While in graduate school studying theater, Carter decided to incorporate his dramatic interest into an exciting performance and his presentation "Theatre of Thoughts" was born.
