

Apr 14th, 10:00 AM - 11:00 AM

Maoism in South Asia: A Comparative Perspective on Ideology, Practice, and Prospects for the 21st Century

Ryan Nielsen
Illinois Wesleyan University

Meghan Burke, Faculty Advisor
Illinois Wesleyan University

Follow this and additional works at: <https://digitalcommons.iwu.edu/jwprc>

Nielsen, Ryan and Burke, Faculty Advisor, Meghan, "Maoism in South Asia: A Comparative Perspective on Ideology, Practice, and Prospects for the 21st Century" (2012). John Wesley Powell Student Research Conference. 3.

<https://digitalcommons.iwu.edu/jwprc/2012/oralpres7/3>

This Event is protected by copyright and/or related rights. It has been brought to you by Digital Commons @ IWU with permission from the rights-holder(s). You are free to use this material in any way that is permitted by the copyright and related rights legislation that applies to your use. For other uses you need to obtain permission from the rights-holder(s) directly, unless additional rights are indicated by a Creative Commons license in the record and/ or on the work itself. This material has been accepted for inclusion by faculty at Illinois Wesleyan University. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@iwu.edu.

©Copyright is owned by the author of this document.

Oral Presentation O7.3

MAOISM IN SOUTH ASIA: A COMPARATIVE PERSPECTIVE ON IDEOLOGY, PRACTICE, AND PROSPECTS FOR THE 21ST CENTURY

Ryan Nielsen and Meghan Burke*
International Studies, Illinois Wesleyan University

The largely rural, peasant societies of India and Nepal—along with the relationship between India/Nepal and advanced capitalist countries—have resulted in similar domestic situations in both countries that are/were favorable to building revolutionary Maoist movements. The respective communist parties that are leading Maoist movements in India and Nepal have/had analyzed the domestic situations in each country to be semi-feudal and semi-colonial, thus drawing on the historical legacy of Maoism to lead revolutionary struggles. However, the unique particularities in both Nepal and India have presented complexities that have led to ideological divergences and a contestation of Maoism and New Democracy as a means for making communist revolution.