INTERNAL AND TRANSNATIONAL MEXICAN MIGRATION:
A MARXIAN APPROACH

Alejandro H. Monzón and Meghan Burke*
Sociology and Anthropology Department, Illinois Wesleyan University

The internal and transnational migration of workers from the global south is an increasingly salient phenomenon that many scholars seek to explain. Karl Marx’s indispensable work, Capital: a Critique of Political Economy provides a conceptual framework that can be applied to explain the phenomenon of migration and its consequences. In this exploratory work, I use Marxian concepts found in Capital to argue that migration of subsistence farmers within Mexico and from Mexico to the United States is a result of the primitive accumulation of capital as well as the need for a reserve army of labor for production. Examining Mexican migration through the Marxian lens exposes the inhumane social relations within capitalism.
