The Latino Immigrant Experience: An Interdisciplinary Review of the Outcomes of Historical and Current Institutionalized Inequalities

Erin Howes
Illinois Wesleyan University

Sumer Seiki, Faculty Advisor
Illinois Wesleyan University

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.iwu.edu/jwprc/2012/oralpres12/1

https://digitalcommons.iwu.edu/jwprc/2012/oralpres12/1

This Event is protected by copyright and/or related rights. It has been brought to you by Digital Commons @ IWU with permission from the rights-holder(s). You are free to use this material in any way that is permitted by the copyright and related rights legislation that applies to your use. For other uses you need to obtain permission from the rights-holder(s) directly, unless additional rights are indicated by a Creative Commons license in the record and/ or on the work itself. This material has been accepted for inclusion by faculty at Illinois Wesleyan University. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@iwu.edu.
©Copyright is owned by the author of this document.
The United States is regarded as a country founded and formed on the basis of immigration and cultural diversity. The recent surge of Latino immigration has been one of the largest in the country’s history, yet has this immigrant group has experienced some of the most detrimental effects. This literature uses both qualitative and quantitative research in sociology, psychology, and economics to gain further understanding of the strong intersectionality of the Mexican immigrant identity, the deeply rooted inequalities and institutionalized prejudices in the United States both historically and currently, and how the United States is affected by the presence of documented and undocumented Latino immigrants. My findings suggest that the Latino immigrant population is burdened by assimilatory pressures and xenophobic relations that have led to personal hardships relating to language, identity, and familial customs and public sectors in the labor force, educational systems, and political decision-making.