Danyelle Means/2

the standoff on the Pine Ridge reservation in the early 1970s.

Explorer-geologist John Wesley Powell, a one-armed Civil War veteran and a founder of the National Geographic Society, joined the IWU faculty in 1865. He was the first U.S. professor to use field work in teaching science. In 1867, Powell took IWU students to Colorado's mountains --the first expedition of its kind in the history of U.S. higher education.
