FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Apr. 27, 1982 jb

Illinois Wesleyan University ceramics students of Anna C. Holcombe, assistant professor of art, will hold an open house and pottery sale from 10 a.m.-5 p.m. Friday, May 7, in the Carriage House on the university campus.

The public is invited to attend. The Carriage House is located behind Blackstock Hall, 1102 N. East St., with entrance on the east side of the building.

During the day, these intermediate and advanced students, some of whom are non-art majors, will be demonstrating raku firing. This is a Japanese method of firing ceramics in which glazed pieces are pulled out of a kiln at 1,300 degrees and thrown into combustible materials to produce a smoked effect.

A variety of finished work, both functional and artistic, will be available for purchase.
