Two members of the Illinois Wesleyan University School of Nursing faculty, Dr. Jerry Durham and Betty Hatcher, are co-authors of an article, "Reducing Psychological Complications for the Critically ill AIDS Patient," in the current issue of "DCCN (Dimensions of Critical Care Nursing) Journal."

The article offers advice on how to recognize and cope with the crises that Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome imposes upon patients and their families as well as care-givers.

Durham also has been appointed to the editorial review board of the journal, "Issues in Mental Health Nursing." The journal is published quarterly in Washington, D.C.
