Dr. James P. Sikora Professor of Sociology

Recipient of The Pantagraph Award for Teaching Excellence — 2007

James Sikora grew up on the rougher side of Chicago in the 1940s. He watched friends and family members struggle daily with the difficulties of their lives, leaving him with a quiet desire to understand more about people and the troubles they face.

Admitting he was never much of a student, stints in the Marines and managing Kroger stores gave Dr. Sikora the confidence to attend classes at George Williams College in Chicago. His goal was to work with youth, maybe assist them to avoid the dangers of the streets, as organizations like the Boy Scouts had done for him years ago. At George Williams he met a sociology professor, who inspired him to continue his education and pointed him toward Southern Illinois University.

In 1968, Professor Sikora graduated from SIU with a bachelor's degree in sociology and political science. His work earned him a fellowship to the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, where he earned his master's degree and Ph.D. in sociology in 1970 and 1972. During his time at the U of I, Dr. Sikora taught courses at Parkland Community College, and realized he enjoyed the chance to teach and to learn from his own students.

Taking a position at the University of Tennessee-Chattanooga in 1973, Dr. Sikora made a promise to himself to contribute to the community as he taught. While at Tennessee, he taught courses at the Walker Correctional Institution in Rock Springs, Ga., served on the mayor's human relations council, and assisted the juvenile courts. Ever active in the community, he wrote grants, organized workshops and gave presentations on crime in America, community-police relations and volunteering. One grant resulted with bringing the Rev. Jesse Jackson's PUSH program to Chattanooga.

Professor Sikora brought that drive with him to Illinois Wesleyan University in 1979, when he accepted the position as chair of the Department of Sociology. Here, he has shaped the curriculum, faculty and philosophy of the department and is known for his active community involvement and his dedication to his students. Along with Illinois Wesleyan Professor of Political Science James Simeone, Dr. Sikora established the Action Research Center in 2003, pairing students with community partners. The Center immerses students in community-wide work to gain skills which integrate with the theoretical information of the classroom. Projects range from gathering information on the area's homeless population to helping move a historic one-room schoolhouse to save it from destruction and to continue using it to educate school children.

In keeping with the promise to himself to live as he teaches, Professor Sikora also works actively in the community. Along with assisting on projects for not-for-profit organizations such as PATH, Habitat for Humanity, Heartland Head Start and the Unity Community Center, Dr. Sikora is a prolific grant-writer. He is sought by many community leaders, such as the Bloomington Police, for whom he gained a grant for a community-policing program in 1994.

Respected both personally and professionally at Illinois Wesleyan, Dr. Sikora was named chair of the American Sociological Association's Committee on Teaching for 1991-92. He was president of the Illinois Sociological Association in 1986.

Though his efforts continue with hands-on work, his main focus is the classroom. Professor Sikora attributes his love of teaching to an endless curiosity. His students revel in his countless stories and his ability to reveal them to different environments with kindness, wit and humor.

Excellence in teaching is a hallmark of Illinois Wesleyan. The Pantagraph Award was established to recognize this strength and to honor one faculty member at this occasion who brings spirit, passion and scholarship to the art of teaching. Today we honor James Sikora.

This program is dedicated to the Class of 2007
to students who have earned scholastic and activity honors.

Presiding—Scott Simons '07, Class President
