

2015

Documenting Your Journey

Jake Thaker

Illinois Wesleyan University

Recommended Citation

Thaker, Jake, "Documenting Your Journey" (2015). Remarks and Messages. Paper 6.
http://digitalcommons.iwu.edu/senate_news/6

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by The Ames Library, the Andrew W. Mellon Center for Curricular and Faculty Development, the Office of the Provost and the Office of the President. It has been accepted for inclusion in Digital Commons @ IWU by the Student Senate at Illinois Wesleyan University. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@iwu.edu.

©Copyright is owned by the author of this document.

September 9, 2015

Documenting Your Journey

A few weeks ago, at this same location, New Student Convocation occurred. Here, spirits for the new school year were high, we all looked forward to class, and the person next to you smelled a little funny. I can sense the stress on campus with the school year actually kicking in. Let me share a few awkward moments we all know too well to lighten the mood.

TAM when you pass by someone in the dugout, they say your name, you don't know theirs. (do the hey, your name is...)

TAM when your professor asks "who did the reading."

TAM when you realize Friday's homework was actually due today.

TAM when you see your professor at Kroger. Yes, they're human too.

TAM when you finally answer a question in class. And it's wrong (me)

TAM when you're not sure you have free time or are actually forgetting everything

Kevin's book highlighted many of his experiences during his time at Liberty. Allow yourselves to mentally document your experiences as well, no matter how awkward or silly they may be. Your classes will teach you what you need for your careers. Your time away from class will teach you what you need for life. Still make sure to stay on top of your academic game, keep your momentum going, and kick some ass.