Invocation for President Jensen’s Inauguration
April 2, 2016
Elyse Nelson Winger, University Chaplain

We gather together at the advent of spring electric blue flowers brazen pink magnolias downy buds and greening grass all declare: new life begins

We gather together on this campus awash in re-birth not only of earth but of ideas and ideals for today we commence a new season at our University as we inaugurate the President of Illinois Wesleyan

May the chorus of voices this joyful, hope-filled hour inspire renewal among us and ready us for the work ahead When the world deals death may we proclaim new life When the world divides may we proclaim community When the world doubts the value of critical inquiry may we proclaim the necessity of our liberal arts

And like the living things across our landscape that in glorious diversity herald the advent of spring may we—across disciplines and generations, religions and cultures—celebrate this new season of learning, leadership and life together

You may be seated.
