This piece was written to accompany a movie, also written by Daniel Vendt. In the movie, a student goes to class and sees "Paper due Today" written on the whiteboard. He realizes that he left the paper in his room, and rushes out to get it. Meanwhile, the professor for the class leaves his office, and is almost to the classroom when he realizes that he forgot something on his desk. The professor returns to retrieve the item, and returns to the class. Luckily, our hero has beaten him to the classroom, paper in hand. Unfortunately, we discover that the writing on the board was from a previous class, and as the Professor erases the writing and writes "Test Today- Open Notes" on the board, our hero realizes that he left his notes in his room as well, and rushes out a second time.

This movie was premiered on Oct. 30th, 2004, starring Eric Malmquist as the student, and Dr. Stephen Press as the professor. The performers were: Katrina Stansbury, Clarinet; Elizabeth de Martelly, bassoon; Daniel Monge, horn; Casey Brant, trumpet; Lisa Boland, violin; Diane Wuthrich, viola; Jessica Dixon, cello; and Matt Kooi, piano. Daniel Vendt conducted for the recording session.
