About the Authors. . .

Anne Barker is a senior English and theatre arts double major. After graduation, she plans to pursue a career in dramaturgy and literary management. The amount of postage spent this year to send out applications and resumes has put her solidly into debt.

Cari Frus will graduate in May with a double major in psychology and religion. Eventually, she plans to complete a master's degree which will allow her to counsel people with HIV/AIDS. Cari is currently a hospice volunteer.

Dima Gharaibeh is a senior music composition major with a low brass concentration. After a year or two of travel and volunteer work, she hopes to continue her education at the graduate school level in either ethnomusicology/composition or music therapy.

Winona Mefford will graduate in May 1996 with a music major and psychology minor. She also is interested in film history, with an emphasis on the silent film era. Winona hopes to eventually go back to school to earn a business degree.

Lisa Southworth is a sophomore English major with strong interests in religion and women's studies as well. Next fall she hopes to study abroad in England and return a better writer. Eventually, she hopes to continue her studies in graduate school.

Christopher DiTomo is a freshman majoring in sociocultural anthropology and English, which he merges in his passion for sociolinguistics and the social constructs of reality. His plans include ethnographic field work in India and a doctorate in Anthropology.
